Corn Growers Convene In Western Pennsylvania

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.)—The annual corn conference sponsored by the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers and Penn State Cooperative Extension attracted a large crowd of corn growers and agribusiness representatives this week. The meeting Tuesday featured the presentation of club awards and a program of grower information.

Mike Wagner, executive director, Ohio Corn Growers, reported on their use of a state checkoff for funds to promote new non-feed uses of corn. The increased use of ethanol in Ohio has been the result of a public relations campaign with legislators, car mechanics and the general public. Packaging materials that dissolve in water and a new absorbant material made from corn for disposable baby diapers also received wide attention from the market.

The Ohio checkoff is one-half cent per bushel, and officials of the Pennsylvania association announced that they have voted to contact Boyd Wolff, Pennsylvania ag secretary, to implement a similar program in Pennsylvania.

Jim Bower, Bower Trading, Inc., West Lafayette, IN, reported on ways to use the futures market in marketing corn. He showed historical graphs that prove farmers sell most of their corn at the lowest price of the year. Bower helps his clients reverse that trend by watching what the large speculative funds are doing and taking the

Taking Care Of Environmental, Neighbor, Industry Concerns Are Some Tasks Facing Chester Conservation Farmers

LANDENBERG (Chester Co.) —Farmers could be underestimating the importance of the mushroom industry to Chester and surrounding counties, and a New Garden Township dairy farmer wants to fix that.

C. Barclay Hoopes and family, who operate High Point Acres, contribute a diversity of resources and talents to supporting that industry. Many other farmers, especially those who have horses and those that sell hay, contribute vital ingredients that go into making compost which powers the mushroom industry.

That industry ranks number one in the country. "One benefits the other, and that's the way we have to work," said Hoopes, noting that mushrooms are the state's "number one cash crop."

According to the 1991-1992 state statistical summary, the Agaricus mushroom crop was valued at $246 million in the 1990-1991 season, and with all varieties combined, production stood at 351.2 million pounds.

Mushroom country

"We live in mushroom country here, the greatest agricultural enterprise in this county," said Barclay, who is president of the Delaware-Chester Farmer's Association, the local operating arm of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association. "I have a great tie to that mushroom industry."

But increasingly that industry is under pressure. There are developments popping up all over the area, many of which surround High Point Acres.

There are environmental pressures, which farmers must, as good stewards, live with. And, as Hoopes was quick to remind Lancaster Farming in a recent interview at his farm, as a member of the conservation district since 1968, his fifth-generation farm has been following and implementing plans set up by the district since they joined.

For his efforts, Hoopes was recently honored with the Chester County Conservation District's Farmer of the Year Award at the Chester Crops Day. Hoopes and his family — including wife Diana and sons Jeff and Mark — farm 210 acres and milk 85 Holsteins, with 60 heifers. Herd average is 19,925 pounds.

Red Clay/White Clay

In 1990, Barclay and Diana signed on as cooperators in the conservation district's Red Clay/White Clay Demonstration Farm Project. They received $27,000 in cost-share money to build a dry manure storage pad and storage pond to help save the White Clay and Red Clay tributaries. (The White Clay Creek originates in southeast Chester County and eventually makes its way to the Delaware River. It supports trout, in addition to many more types of fish species, woody plants and wildflowers, and various animals

Maxima Sets World Record

LISA KNAPTON
Production Records Specialist
Holstein Association of America

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — A new world record for milk production has been set by Tullando Royalty Maxima, owned by Tullando Farm Inc. in Orford, N.H.

As a mature cow of five years, Maxima recently completed her 365-day record with 58,952 pounds of milk, 1,804 pounds of fat and 1,680 pounds of protein. She was milked three times per day.

The Holstein Association verification test program supports the new record.

Maxima's record surpasses the world record held since 1975 by Beecher Arlinda Ellen. Ellen produced 55,661 pounds of milk and 1,572 pounds of fat milking twice a day.

Maxima's roots run parallel with the history of Tullando Farm. The George and Barbara Tullar family began farming in Orford in 1956. In 1959, the Tullars decided to start building a registered Holstein herd. They traded eight grade cows (some were colored) for two registered Holsteins.

The seventh dam of Maxima, Upwey R A Keepsake Veronica was one of these two original foundation cows in the Tullars' herd.

Maxima is backed by 12 generations of Holstein Association sponsored production records, beginning in 1939. Production is no stranger to this cow family. While none of her ancestors have by any means challenged Maxima, they have all made respectable records.

Maxima's maternal sister, Tullando Joe Mogul just completed her 6-11, 365-day record with 40,872 pounds of milk, 1,499

Lebanon 4-H Livestock Holds Banquet

PRESCOTT (Lebanon Co.) — The 91-member Lebanon County 4-H Livestock Club held its annual banquet Tuesday evening at the Prescott Fire Hall in Prescott, and noted significant achievements by youth involved in each of the three major livestock groups.

Following a meal and introduction of members, leaders and recognition of the Friends of 4-H, a presentation of awards was made to those members whose animals had won top places during the club's annual Winter Roundup, held just weeks previous to the state Farm Show.

Also recognized were those who had participated in the state and regional contests and the results of those contests.

In addition to awards, a presentation of saving bonds provided by Agway of Lebanon Inc. was made to youth who won top prizes at the county fair for owning, breeding and showing winning market hogs, lambs and beef.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MARCH 8-14, 1993

FULL WORM MOON, MARCH 8.

THE BLIZZARD OF '88.

One hundred and five years ago the Northeast experienced a blizzard worthy of the name. From March 11-14, 1888, ten states were battered by a collision of two massive storm fronts, leaving the area buried under three to five feet of snow Four hundred people died in the storm, and an estimated $20 million worth of damage occurred in New York City alone. Telephone and telegraph lines were down, and trains were at a standstill from Washington, D.C., to Maine In Hartford and New York and other cities, incredible snow tunnels were constructed to get through the 40-foot drifts. No storm in over a hundred years had brought more snow. And no storm since has broken the record

In March much snow
To plants and trees much woe.

— German proverb

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Wash your scrub and bottle brushes in the top rack of the dishwasher.

EARTHWISE

Last week we mentioned that microwaves are an energy-efficient way to cook moderate amounts of food. The good news is they're also "vitamin-efficient!" A recent study done at Cornell University found that using microwaves to cook vegetables better preserves water-soluble vitamins (such as vitamin C and the B vitamins) than other methods using more water and longer heating. Researchers found final levels of the nutrients were higher in the microwave-cooked food

CREAMY CABBAGE

1 medium head cabbage
2 tablespoons water
1 3-ounce package cream cheese, cubed
2 tablespoons milk
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chives
dash pepper
paprika for garnish

Shred cabbage into 2-quart microproof casserole. Add water, cover, and cook on high power for 7 to 9 minutes, stirring once. Add next 5 ingredients. Cover and cook on high for 1 minute. Stir well to mix. Garnish with paprika.

Makes 5 to 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

MIDWEST: Sunny and mild then cold wave with snow; blizzard in the northwest.

OPINION

Bite The Hand Not Wise

New energy and environmental tax proposals currently under consideration by Congress and the Clinton Administration could hit farmers four different ways.

"Energy taxes that have been proposed in the past hit farmers twice," said Gary D. Myers, President of The Fertilizer Institute. "Environmental taxes that recently have been proposed also hit farmers twice. With each, farmers pay directly for the energy they use on the farm and then pay again through the increased input costs. So enactment of both types of taxes would mean a four-way hit on farmers."

Among the tax proposals that would fall disproportionately on agriculture are:

— H.R. 804, introduced by Rep. Pete Stark (D-CA), phasing in a carbon tax that would amount to a 48 cents/MCF tax on natural gas.

— Broad-based energy tax on British thermal units (BTUs). A 40 cent /MMBTU is equivalent to a 5-cent/gallon gas tax.

— Environmental taxes such as those contained in Rep. Gerry Studds (D-MA) Clean Water Funding proposal, taxing the use and production of inputs to pay for urban sewer systems.

— A Joint Committee on Taxation proposal which studies the effect of combining energy and environmental taxes.

Just one of these taxes — a tax on the production of fertilizer in the Studds proposal — would greatly reduce the annual profitability of an average corn farmer.

"Now is the time for agriculture to raise its collective voice in a fight for fairness," said Myers. "Energy plays a vital part in every facet of farm production. The long-term effect of these penalties would be lower farm production, decreased competitiveness for our agricultural sector on the world market, and higher prices for American consumers."

New taxes that bite the hand that feeds the nation are not wise.

To Reconsider Full Season Corn

As a result of last year's cool growing season, many farmers are considering the purchase of shorter season corn hybrids.

Before you buy a shorter season hybrid, make sure that is what you really want to do. By buying shorter season hybrids, you will be reducing yield potential.

Do not overreact to a very unusual 1992 growing season. When selecting corn hybrids, look at which ones have performed the best over a five-year period and best fit your objectives, that is, yield, test weight, standability, and disease resistance. You may also spread your risk by planting corn over at least a two week period from your optimum planting date.

So, do not abandon your successful hybrids because of one unusual growing season but stick with the ones that have worked for you over the years.

To Be Aware Of Atrazine Label Changes

Atrazine is probably the most commonly used herbicide on farms today. It is marketed by many companies in many combinations with other herbicides.

During the last several years, the label for the use of products containing atrazine has undergone several changes. Changes for 1993 include:

- Maximum annual rate of application has been reduced and is based on the soil slope and the amount of crop residue left on the soil surface.
- The mixing or loading of atrazine within 50 feet of a well, stream, or sinkhole is not permitted.
- Atrazine must be kept back 200 feet from lakes and reservoirs, but not farm ponds unless they are used as a human drinking water source.
- A 66-foot no-spray area must be maintained where field surface water enters a perennial or intermittent stream or river.

Farmers should study the new label before the start of the growing season to ensure that they are following all the new use restrictions. It is every farmer's responsibility to make sure they read, understand, and follow all the instructions on all pesticide labels.

To Check Equipment

The recent winter weather has given us additional time to do winter maintenance on our equipment. Winter maintenance involves checking over each piece of equipment and making the necessary repairs.

Check for minor oil leaks, free travel in the clutch, belts and tires for wear, drying out and cracks, and lights. Grease moving parts and sharpen knives in harvesting equipment. Also, calibrate drills and planters and make sure monitors are properly working to ensure correct plant populations.

Change the oil and fuel and transmission filters on a regular basis. Spending some time now checking and performing necessary maintenance could save you many valuable hours during the busier planting and harvesting seasons.

Farm Forum

Editor

I think we farmers should all individually contact our local, State, and especially Federal Representatives and let them know we are totally opposed to the proposed energy taxes by President Clinton. I receive "Newsweek" Magazine, a very urban magazine, and it telling all of its readers how fair, equitable, wonderful energy taxes - Gasoline taxes are; How "most" Americans want their taxes increased. And the biggest lie of all "Raising Taxes will control the deficit"; Hogwash, studies have proven that Congress will $2- for $1- of new tax income.

Also I think it is time all farmers started to consider the current farm subsidy programs which give ±80% of the money to 10% of the farmers.

We farmers have accepted the idea of taxing the poor-lower middle-class urban-suburban-rural wage earner to maintain the life-styles of multi-millionaire farmers. I know so many middle-class wage earners who cannot afford to buy even an entry level home. Yet we farmers demand subsidy programs that tax these low-income wage-earners and give these subsidies to wealthy farmers and even non-residents owners.

I would certainly appreciate hearing other farmer's comments or better yet a good "Lancaster Farming" report on who gets farm subsidy payments and how balanced are the payments, should there be more restrictions on the maximum ceiling of Government payments to farm corporation-families

I just think it is time for farmers to openly discuss subsidies.

A WORD FOR "THE WORD"
March 7, 1993

Background Scripture:
John 1:1-18.
Devotional Reading:
John 1:29-23, 29-34.

About 500 B.C., a Greek Philosopher, Heraclitus, wrote of "a Logos that is ever true, though men are unable to understand it...; for although all things come to pass in accordance with this Logos, men seem as if they had no experience of them."

Heraclitus and other Greek thinkers used the word Logos to represent the mind of God that is reflected in the world's rationality, order and harmony. The Logos was the supreme intelligence by which the world was created.

In Jesus's day there was a community of Jews, the Essenes, who lived together in the desert wilds of Qumran, where in our own time the Dead Sea Scrolls were discovered. An anonymous Essene wrote in a psalm, "By his knowledge, all has come into being, and by his thought he directs everything and without him nothing is done."

THE LOGOS

Those words cannot help but help us to recall the same thought that stirs the Prologue to John (1:1-18): "He was in the beginning with God; all things were made through him, and without him was not anything made that was made."

These words have both excited and puzzled readers through the centuries, for the writer of the Fourth Gospel, writing in Greek, begins his gospel with this Greek term: "In the beginning was the Logos, and the Logos was with God, and the Logos was God." In our English versions of the Bible we have difficulty in rendering this Logos in a single word. Most of them translate Logos as "Word," but that is not really adequate. We think of "word" as a spoken sound or written symbol and John was thinking far beyond that is not really adequate. We think of "word" as a spoken sound or written symbol and John was thinking far beyond that. He was speaking of the mind, the knowledge, the activity of God.

In fact, the only two translators I have found not using "Word" for Logos are James Moffatt, who simply said Logos and J.B. Phillips, who begins his translation/paraphrase of John with these words: "At the beginning, God expressed himself." In other words, Phillips is saying, the Logos is God's own self-expression. When he created the world, he expressed himself. When he gave Israel the law, he expressed himself. When he wants us to know him, he expresses or reveals himself to us.

THE EXPRESSION

This is an important concept because in Jesus' day--as well as in our own--many people were convinced that, while there is compelling reason to believe in a Divine Source, it is virtually impossible for us to know what God is like. In fact, great numbers of thinkers and seekers through the centuries have struggled to find the God that seems so elusive, so obscure.

The whole point of the Prologue to John's Gospel is that this God, whom many have thought of as being always beyond human reach is, according to John, a God, not who hides from us, but who expresses himself so that we may know him--because that is his nature: this Logos aspect of God wants us to be enlightened. God sends his light into the world in many different ways, but the fullest expression of God's nature and purpose occurred when the "the Word became flesh... ." Meaning: the Logos, God's expressiveness, as Phillips puts it, "became a human being." All that we can and need to know of God is wrapped up in one human being.

That human being was and is Jesus the Christ.

Taking Care Of Environmental, Neighbor, Industry Concerns Are Some Tasks Facing Chester Conservation Farmers

and birds. Recently, there has been movement to place the White Clay into the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.)

Since purchasing the farm in 1972, Barclay and his family have been steadily incorporating conservation practices. In fact, on one of their first dates, according to Diana, they walked contours.

"What (Barclay) did was he tied bale string together and I said, What are we doing this afternoon?" said Diana. "He said, I don't know. But don't get dressed too good. And I wound up walking those hills over there . . . and he staked it out."

Diana said protecting the White Clay and Red Clay watersheds is important, because Barclay has "always been of the opinion, if it falls on my place, it's my water. I want to contain my water and don't want to keep having concerns."

Hosted project

Diana said that because of their ongoing involvement in conforming to the plans, and eventual completion of most of them, their farm hosted the demonstration project.

Part of the process involved installing roof and barnyard runoff practices, which included laying a substantial amount of underground pipe. One set of pipes took water from the barnyard, including dairy waste water, and dropped it into the manure pond. The other set of pipes took roof runoff — clean water — and allowed it to go into the creek.

Also, fencing was installed. Because of the hilly nature of the ground surrounding the barn area, two terraces were completed to manage water runoff. Also, the farmer completed more terracing, including rented ground.

Doing the work allows the dairy farmers to maintain good land stewardship and neighborhood relations — critical if farmers want to continue farming when development takes place all around them.

"And that's one thing that all of us in agriculture have got to do," he said. "We have to work with the public, communicate with them."

Host tours

Hoopes said many of the schools in the area do not have traditional FFA or required agricultural studies anymore. So the farm family decided to host several tours conducted through the Ag In the Classroom program. The plan to do so again in July of 1993. In the fall of last year, several academically talented students visited the farm, and many of the children were impressed.

"You have to start with the children," said Diana. "I don't think the children saw so much manure at one place in their lives." However, Diana said that the teacher did a good job in explaining where milk comes from and the products generated as a result — including waste products. The teacher, according to Diana, said "You see how we have a big environment. But Mr. Hoopes has his own environment. By doing what he is doing, he's incorporating himself into ours."

The way of life of farming has gone on in the Hoopes family for more than 150 years, according to Barclay. But more and more, he and other Chester County farmers are feeling intense development pressure. New housing developments encircle his farm — some cost $400,000 or more.

"That was one thing we didn't foresee at all," said Barclay. "I knew we hade development pressure, but this last wave out of the '80s, I never felt it would have the impact on us as it did."

Barclay said because of the new homes, "you've got people constantly looking at you, you know?"

Environment issues

With the general public, environmental issues are an extremely high priority, according to the dairy farmer. This has forced him to take a closer look at his own operations, including his ability to keep farming as a livelihood. He said he intends to diversify and to stay "one step ahead.

"I don't want anybody coming in here and forcing me to have to do anything. I don't like that."

Diana said many times farmers are the first to be blamed when there are problems. "We're the first when you go down there and see a pile of manure," she said. "(People think) OK, there it is, that's the problem, there you go, there you go! And for some people, it's surface thinking. And water is one of the top priority issues of the 1990s, and we do have to protect this resource, because all life forms need it!

"As a parent and a grandparent, I want the water supply to be clean. I want to do my part, and I want somebody up ahead of me to do their part, too," she said. "We're not going to have a future if we don't have water."

Plans in place

Having the conservation plans in place and placing on paper the facets of being a good steward, including nutrient management planning, goes with being a good steward. "But there's some protection in there, also," said Diana. "You're building yourself a fortress. You're planning to be here for a long time."

But remaining a good steward is top in their minds. They collect about eight tons of newspapers per month from the local solid waste authority and chop it up for bedding. Chopped newspaper has kept the cows clean and dry, works well to absorb water, and provides a good source of plant nutrients.

Diana said that "farmers have really been one of the first recyclers. I mean, with farmers, if they're good, they don't waste much, they use everything they've got and put it back in the ground."

Barclay mentioned that he doesn't wanto to be known as somebody who has really done something a lot of others hadn't done previously. He said that farmers were contouring back in the 1940s.

Inspect operations

The Landenberg dairy farmer continues to closely inspect how his operations impact the environment.

"You can't imagine, when I go out on that road with a manure spreader, how concerned I am for the amount of stuff that might get on that road. I don't want any on that road. I don't want anybody upset with me.

"We want a harmonious relationship with the people in the community," said Barclay. "We don't want to have neighbors all upset at us."

"As far as I'm concerned," he said, "I think farmers are good stewards, and if you're not a good steward, why—"

"—you're not going to be in business, then," said Diana.

In 1990, Barclay and Diana Hoopes signed on as cooperators in the conservation district's Red Clay/White Clay Demonstration Farm Project. They received $27,000 in cost-share money to build this dry manure storage pad and storage pond to help save the White Clay and Red Clay tributaries.

Barclay Hoopes, right and Charlie Smith, Atlantic Breeders Co-op direct herd sales representative, review a semen delivery order.

The Hoopes collect about eight tons of newspapers per month from the local solid waste authority and chop it up for bedding. Chopped newspaper has kept the cows clean and dry, works well to absorb water, and provides a good source of plant nutrients.

Grange Sponsors Farm Safety, Rescue Clinics

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Three farm safety seminars are to be held through March at various locations in Lebanon County.

Sponsored by the North Jackson Grange, those for whom the seminars are designed include emergency medical technicians, paramedics, farmers, and firemen.

The seminars are being offered out of concern for the lives of farmers and live-saving personnel, but it should also be of interest to farm owners who may be liable for damages resulting from accidents on their farms.

On March 8, at 7:30 p.m., at the North Jackson Grange Hall, located at Kutztown and Woleber roads, Kenneth Winebark, county extension agent, is to talk about what can be done to safeguard a farm from a safety standpoint.

On March 15, a split-day seminar is to address issues of concern on the farm and is to include a demonstration of equipment. Held at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds, the demonstration seminar is to run from 9 a.m. to noon and from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Equipment to be demonstrated is being donated and operated by Lebanon County equipment dealers. Those whose company has a piece of special equipment that would be of interest to those attending, should call Betty Light at (717) 865-5148 and specify which of the two March 15 programs and what time attendance would be requested.

To date, the equipment being demonstrated includes manure pits and silos, a forage box, a regular baler, a haybine, a corn picker, small equipment, forage harvester, combine, round baler, and a manure spreader.

Participating implement dealers include Star Silos, of Myerstown; Lebanon Valley Implement Inc., Richland; Wengers Farm Machinery, Myerstown; Zimmermans Sales and Service, Bethel; Keller Bros. Inc., Buffalo Springs; Evergreen Tractor Co., Lebanon; Shuey's Sales and Service, Ono; and Umbergers of Fontana Inc., of Fontana.

Guidelines for demonstrating the equipment has been set by the Grange Safety Committee.

Those who wish to demonstrate equipment should identify the machine, how it operates, how it handles the crop, how the crop moves through the machinery, etc.

They should also point out the most hazardous areas of the equipment. For example, with a cornpicker, the snapper rollers and husking bed would be considered hazardous; with a combine, the cutter bar and auger in the grain box would be the hazardous areas.

With the group standing away from the machinery, start the equipment and demonstrate it actually working.

Shut off the equipment and hand feed a dummy into the hazardous area to simulate a trapped victim. Demonstrators may be albel to turn PTOs or fly wheels enough to help make the demonstration as real as possible.

And lastly, demonstrators should then tell rescue people to go to work. Be prepared to answer questions about to release tension, or how to reverse an auger, or how to dismantle some parts.

The most common question starts out with, "What if I do this?"

If possible, allow participating rescue workers learn by doing, rather than by telling them the answer.

On March 22, at 7:30 p.m., at the North Jackson Grange Hall, Dennis Murphy, Penn State University farm safety expert, is to discuss first response actions that emergency rescue personnel should take.

How Calcium Nitrate fertilizer can improve the yield and quality of cole crops

Cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, sprouts and collards are typically grown under cool soil, short season conditions. The fertilizer must perform accordingly.

Precise nitrogen control is vital to optimum growth
Calcium Nitrate provides fast-acting nitrate nitrogen—the key to nitrogen control in short season crops. Calcium Nitrate goes to work immediately, even under cool soil conditions. The result is controlled, uniform crop nutrition.

Nitrate nitrogen has many advantages over ammonium nitrogen
Nitrate nitrogen is immediately available for plant use; ammonium fertilizers, however, must convert to nitrate. This conversion takes time and can vary depending on soil temperature, moisture, aeration and soil pH. Uneven or delayed nitrogen availability can result in erratic nitrogen feeding during the season and can affect crop growth, maturity and quality.

In addition, urea or ammonium nitrogen fertilizers lower soil pH. This does not occur with Calcium Nitrate.

A nitrate source of nitrogen can produce desirable crop response, as shown in the data below:

Effect of N-Source and Rate on Cauliflower Head Weight

Calcium essential for proper leaf development
Calcium is an essential nutrient for leaf and heading crops. Rapidly expanding leaves must draw calcium through water movement from roots for proper development of leaf tissues. A deficiency of calcium can cause leaf margins to become dried or burned; this is particularly evident in the youngest leaves.

Calcium Nitrate provides 19% water-soluble calcium for vital growth requirements, and contributes to better color, firmness and improved shipping quality.

Nutritional excellence
Calcium Nitrate is an ideal combination of fast-acting nitrate nitrogen and water-soluble calcium. Nutritional excellence for the crop you count on!

As with any fertilizer application consult your extension office or other advisory service for recommended practice that meets local crop and soil conditions.

Eastern Meeting At Hershey

SYRACUSE N.Y. — About 200 delegate members of Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative are expected to attend the group's annual meeting scheduled for March 16 at the Hershy Lodge and Convention Center.

It is the first delegate meeting that the 70-year-old cooperative is to have in Hershey and only the third meeting in Pennsylvania. The delegate meeting is scheduled to run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Based in Syracuse, N.Y., Eastern has 3,000 member farms throughout the Northeast, with the majority in Pennsylvnia, New York and Vermont.

"The farmer delegates will meet to discuss the co-op's operations, including hearing reports from management on performance in a number of areas," said Lewis Gardner, cooperative president.

As president Gardner head the co-op's board of directors. He also has a family farm in Galeton, Pennsylvania.

Of specific interest during the meeting, according to Gardner, is that the delegates "will debate several proposals to change the cooperative's bylaws." He also said plans are for action on resolutions submitted by farmers concerning the group's dairy policy.

The dairy promotion agenda in Federal Milk Marketing Order No.4, which includes Pennsylvania, is to be the topic of a luncheon presentation by Dick Norton, general manager of Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area (MAMMA) promotion agency.

In conjunction with the delegate meeting, Eastern Milk is planning a Young Cooperator program for young farmers to be held March 15. The program is to include roundtable discussions on water quality, nuclear power issues, and a talk on Russian agriculture.

WITH YOUR VALUABLE FORAGE CROPS

Research has repeatedly shown that tower silos are the key to providing maximum utilization of home grown feeds.

Consider the facts:

1. Tower silos consistently outperform bunker silos, plastic bags and big round bales in preserving the total digestible nutrients in forage crops.
2. Tower silos give the highest level of palatability of stored forage crops– the result is greater dry matter consumption and higher production.
3. Tower silos eliminate weather as a factor since harvesting can be done at the optimum stage of development.

More Testing For Avian Influenza Needed, Says Scientist

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Poultry producers are not being as aggressive in testing birds in their flocks for possible avian influenza (AI) virus infection as they should be, according to Dr. Patricia Dunn, of Penn State's veterinary science department, on Thursday at the Lancaster County Poultry Progress Day.

Dunn told the 125 poultry producers and industry representatives who attended the meeting that back in 1985-1986, right after the last severe outbreak of avian influenza in Pennsylvania, the labs were testing more than 15,000 samples a month. Although she made clear that the state is not experiencing an outbreak of clinical avian influenza, still, the numbers being tested are only half of what they were in 1985-1986.

Only one live bird market has tested positive in a virus isolation of the type H5N2, and that flock has been depopulated. Live bird markets pose the greatest risk of infection and spread of the virus, according to Dunn, and of the isolates found, there is no evidence of highly pathogenic strains of the virus in any other flock in the state.

But producers should be concerned and follow the steps outlined by Dunn to prevent their own herds from becoming infected with the virus, which is dangerous because it can easily transform from a harmless to a highly pathogenic form.

Producers should remain on the offensive, said Dunn, to prevent what happened in the state in 1983-1984, when piles of dead birds were the result of a massive infection on many flocks. The more producers know, according to Dunn, the more they can do to prevent possible disease outbreaks in flocks.

The laboratories doing the testing are focusing on the Type A avian influenza virus, which has two projections on the surface of it, H and N. There are 14 types of H and nine types of N that exist, she said. But it is the combination — H5N2 — which caused the problems in the 1983-1984 and 1985-1986 outbreaks.

The highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) type can cause the most damage. It can readily change (mutate) unpredictably. Literally, with "a snap of the finger," Dunn said, it can change to one that is benign, which has no affect on the bird, to one that is deadly.

According to Dunn, of particular concern is the way the virus can spread to birds. The most common way is through wild waterfowl near enough to flocks that are exposed. For the virus that struck in 1983-1984, there was a high correlation between the virus in turkeys on the open range and the closeness to waterfowl and their breeding grounds and migration routes.

Dunn pointed out several ways to identify infected birds. Those with the severe infection have swelling or edema of the face and a darkening of the comb. The birds are lethargic, and the feet swell. There may also be signs of severe nervousness. Eventually, the circulatory system collapses, and the bird dies.

The virus, once shed, can exist in fecal material or any organic matter for days at a time. Dunn said that producers should be concerned that the virus contained in 1 gram of manure (which will fit on the surface of a dime) can infect one million chickens.

There are two methods used to detect infection, according to Dunn. One is serology, or detecting the presence of antibodies as a result of the infection (this is an indirect sign of possible presence of the virus). The other is virus isolate, which provides direct proof the virus is present. The virus isolate uses a blood sample and an AGP test that screens any Type A AI virus. Also, the virus can be recovered from fecal material, litter, and feed material.

Producers should note that the seropositive H5N2 evidence has been limited to less than 10 premises in this region, and those premises are under quarantine. The AI virus has been detected in five New Jersey live bird markets, eight New York live bird markets, and one New Jersey farm. (Dunn noted that one farm was tested seropositive but no virus has been isolated to date. Often times a bird can test positive but has somehow rid itself of evidence of the virus.)

One procedure available for producers, according to the Penn State scientist (who is not affiliated with any regulatory agency), is to contact the Pa. Dept. of Agriculture's Bureau of Animal Industry at (717) 783-9550 for questions on what they should do if they suspect possible infection of the flock. But first, broiler, layer, or turkey producers should consider the following ways to stop the potential spread of the virus:

- Anything that moves, including equipment, vehicles, debris, flies, rodents, or anything that can be carried on egg flats, boxes, dead birds, or other items, including people and their clothes, can carry the virus.
- Eliminate all contact with waterfowl. Also, in a diversified poultry area, limit contact and movement with different bird species (turkeys with broilers, layers with turkeys, etc.)
- Discontinue contact with live bird markets and backyard flocks. Avoid contact with all wild birds.
- Continue to monitor any evidence of the virus in your own flock by having tests sent to the laboratory regularly.
- Practice good biosecurity by controlling the movement of people, poultry, and equipment. Sanitize properly, wear clean clothes and boots, and make sure all equipment and clothing is cleaned and sanitized properly. Scrub all material with disinfectant before using again.
- Continue aggressive monitoring of the flock through the AI surveillance program over the long term. Cooperate with all segments of the industry.

Hot weather tips

While producers may not be thinking about hot weather right now, it is still a good time to be preparing for hot weather management tips for poultry, according to Dr. William Weaver, poultry science department, Penn State.

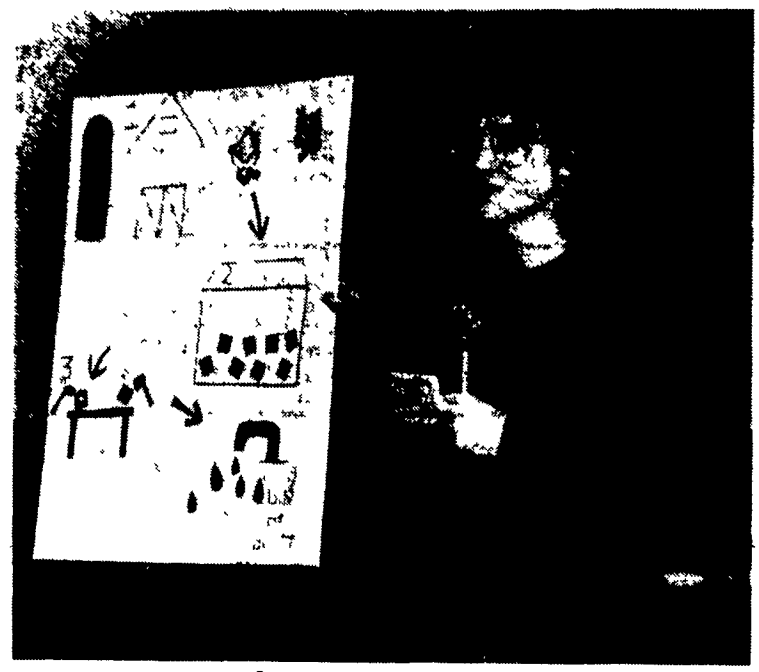
Weaver told the producers that a combination of fogging and tunnel ventilation can work together to help cool birds over the hot summer months.

Weaver examined some of the critical aspects of ensuring proper ventilation for poultry houses. He examined passive ventilation, using curtains, and fan ventilation, which works well to move air across the birds from one side of the house to the other to keep them cool.

Producers should understand that, when the temperature outside is 95 degrees, very seldom is the relative humidity (RH) more than 40 percent, according to Weaver. The higher the temperature, usually lower the RH. If the RH can be lowered, it can affect a drop in temperature enough to keep the birds from dying and keep them eating.

If using a fogger, the rule of thumb is 9 gallons per hour for every 1,000 square feet of coverage. He used an example of a house measuring 42 feet by 10 feet high. A producer would need nine 48-inch fans to maaintain a CFM airflow of 400.

Weaver said that the fogger system works well for big birds as a summertime system, but not as well for little birds. Also, there will be bird migration in the house while using the system.



Marilyn Holloway, Lancaster County Outstanding 4-H member, gave her presentation on broilers and barbecues, of which she was honored as fourth place in the nation at the International Livestock Expo in Louisville, Ky. recently.

SE findings

Dr. David Kradel, USDA, presented the lastest results of the findings of the salmonella enteriditis (SE) Pilot Project and lessons learned. As of January this year, some things about SE were known:

- SE does not appear to be clearly related to specific management factors.
- The environments of 58 percent of the 66 flocks enrolled have been SE positive.
- To date, about 280,000 eggs have been tested. In environmentally positive houses, positive eggs have been found in 33 percent of the flocks.
- Molting is being examined as a risk factor for egg infection in environmentally positive houses.
- Mice would appear to be a significant risk factor for introduction of SE to a flock. Mice have been SE positive in 78 percent of environmentally positive and 29 percent of environmentally negative houses. Controlling mice is vital to help eliminate SE from the flock.
- The source of SE for a flock may be impossible to determine.

Kradel outlined the future projections for the pilot project, which included a need for a program that would service the needs of a larger number of flocks.

Three labs

Dr. Cy Card, Pennsylvania Animal Health Commission, spoke about the efforts to form an accredited system utilizing the three laboratories in the state — Summerdale, New Bolton Center, and Penn State — and to link them together for common technical and testing support.

Eventually, the laboratories can be linked to the state department of agriculture to provide a wealth of support for industry.

By the end of this month, according to Card, a 900 computer access number will be available to transfer lab results and to obtain information from the labs for approved users. The user fee, for those who have computers, would be approximately $100 per line, with connect and other fees, according to Card.

Dr. Mike Hulet, poultry science department at Virginia Tech, explained a variety of ways to remove stress in the grower house and management techniques producers can use now to create a healthier bird.

Also at the Poultry Progress Day, Dr. Paul Patterson, Penn State, presented a slilde tour of Southeastern, the world's largest poultry show in Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Stephen Knable, food science department, Penn State, spoke about on-farm egg washing to reduce SE. And Jeff Fagan, DeKalb, spoke about water quality and bird performance.

Additionally, Marilyn Holloway, Lancaster County Outstanding 4-H member, gave her presentation on broilers and barbecues, of which she was honored as fourth place in the nation at the International Livestock Expo in Louisville, Ky. Nov. 17-19.

Also, Dr. Donald Evans, College of Agricultural Sciences, Penn State, spoke about Pennsylvania Agriculture, The Envy of the World, at Poultry Progress Day.

PFA Washington Tour March 10-11

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — A delegation of 200 farmers from Pennsylvania are expected to travel to Washington D.C. March 10 and 11 to meet with U.S. congressmen on issues affecting agriculture.

Among the issues to be discussed are health care, the economy, international trade, and private property rights.

The face-to-face meetings are to be part of the annual Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) Washington Legislative Tour.

PFA is a voluntary, general farm organixation which represents 23,189 families in 54 county associations. It is part of the nation's largest farm organization, the four-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Part of the purpose of the annual trip is so that members of PFA county farmers' association bi-partisan national legislative committees can have an opportunity to sit down with their federal-level representatives to talk about their group's position on current issues.

"The tour give us the opportunity to make ourselves seen and heard in Washington on matters that are important to us," said Keith Eckel, president of PFA. "With a new Congress gearing up to tackle a host of problems, PFA believes it's important to make sure our lawmakers know where we stand."

Eckel spoke out on PFA position on what he said were key issues.

On environmental issues and private property rights, Eckel said, "Our goal is to protect the private rights of landowners. We want to reduce and minimize unnecessary regulations and to ensure that any regulation, legislation or legal action that restricts private property rights results in compensation."

On the federal budget, taxes and economic growth, Eckel said, "PFA seeks to establish government policies that encourage economic growth, increase productivity, foster greater competitive ability in the international market, enhance profitability and prosperity for all segments of American society and encourage private investment."

On international trade, "We seek to establish trade and related economic policies that promote rather than retard the growth in world trade. PFA advocates trade agreements that establish substantial and progressive reductions in foreign trade barriers and subsidies, and provide for fair competition."

On health care, Eckel had more to say. "PFA recommends the establishment of government policies that recognize that health care is primarily the responsibility of the individual. We believe government health care policies should promote wellness, fitness and preventative care. They should also have a minimum of government intervention.

Rep. Tim Holden, Pennsylvania's only representative on the House Agriculture Committee, is to be the speaker for the banquet. Eckel is to address the breakfast.

opposite position when the funds are over bought or over sold. But just by watching the natural yearly price moves and selling part of the crop in advance has merit, according to Bower.

Bill Pardee, extension crop specialist, Cornell University, emphasized early planting of corn. In fact, corn planted after the ideal planting time for your area will lose a bushel per day in production. This happens because you lose heat and light in a shorter growing season. Pardee said soil temperature is not as important now as it was 20 years ago because the new seedling vigor of modern hybrids makes them adaptable to early planting. While the shoot may not come up until the soil reaches 50 degrees, roots will work down at 45 degrees and develop a system before the plant emerges.

Pardee reported on studies that showed ideal plant populations were between 23,000 and 26,000 for grain and 25,000 to 28,000 for silage. In silage harvest, high grain levels are still important. And the new hybrids have also offered increased fiber digestability.

Gary Snider, farm business consultant, Farm Credit of Western NY, said every farm should have a plan to budget capital and operational needs for the future of the farming operation. If you look what income and savings a new piece of equipment will add to the operation and offset this projection with the added costs of depreciation, interest, repairs, taxes and insurance, you can decide if the purchase is a good investment.

Northeast Dairy Conference Set

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Some 175 dairy leaders from throughout the Northeast are expected to attend the Northeast Dairy Conference, in Corning, N.Y. on Monday, March 29.

This major annual event brings together leaders from all segments of the dairy industry — from farmers to food processors to government officials — in an area stretching from New England to the Middle Atlantic states.

This year's two-day conference, which will take place in Corning's Hilton Hotel, is being hosted by Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative and its 3,000 member farms.

The purpose is to tackle the concerns facing the industry, according to Lewis Gardner, conference president and president of Eastern Milk.

"With the dramatic changes our dairy farmers have had to weather," Gardner said, "it is critical to once again come together to discuss the issues at hand, and examine courses of action that can be taken individually and by the industry as a whole."

With a conference theme of "Operating in the New Dairy Environment," Gardner said that some of the best minds in the industry will lead conference-goers in exploring the impact of structural changes in the processing and production sectors, as well as strategies that will help farmers to survive.

Gardner said that anyone interested in attending the conference may obtain more information by calling Eastern Milk toll free at 1-800-926-2667.

Large, Small Animal Composting At Meeting, Tour

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Disposing of mortality has become a serious problem for many producers of both small and large animals.

Incineration and rendering have become expensive, and burial poses environmental problems. Composting on the farm is an idea which can solve the mortality disposal problem for many farmers.

A meeting on this topic will be held on Thursday morning, March 11, in the basement meeting room at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster.

Dr. Dennis Murphy from the poultry science department at the University of Maryland, a pioneer of the dead bird composting technique, will be the main speaker. Murphy will discuss construction of a dead bird composting unit, small scale composting units, and whole flock composting after depopulation. His recent work composting swine, sheep, and cattle mortality will also be discussed.

Dr. John Schwartz with Penn State extension in Lancaster County will discuss his recent experience with whole flock composting in Pennsylvania.

Registration, which begins at 8:30 a.m., costs $6. Those attending the meeting will board a bus at 10:30 p.m. for a field trip to a Lancaster County farm where poultry and swine mortality are being composted. The bus will return to the Farm and Home Center by 12:30 p.m.

To register, contact Leon Ressler, Penn State extension at (717) 394-6851.

At the present time, the downstairs meeting room of the Farm and Home Center is accessible only by stairs. If you use a wheelchair or crutches or are unable to use stairs and you want to attend a meeting scheduled for this room, contact Leon Ressler at least five working days prior to the scheduled program to arrange for alternative meeting site.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Over the years, the Holstein breed has become the predominant dairy breed in the U.S. This was accomplished by providing farmers with the most profitable cow available.

Today over 90 percent of U.S. dairy cows are Holsteins. The Holstein cow is famous for her innate genetic ability to produce high volumes of nutritious milk.

Today's Holstein breeders are just as committed to improving the Holstein cow as the generations of breeders before them. Based on January 1993 U.S. Department of Agriculture information, the Holstein breed is outpacing all other breeds in genetic improvement.

The data shows the expectant average Predicted Transmitting Ability (PTA) of calves to be born in 1994 resulting from 1993 semen purchases.

Holsteins are clearly the protein breed of the future. The PTAs of the 1994 calves are compared to an average cow of each breed born in 1985.

The PTA represents one half of the genetic merit of the animal. Therefore the Holstein calves born in 1994 are expected to produce 104 pounds of protein more than the Holstein cows born in 1985.

The economic index Milk-Fat-Protein Dollars (MFP$) is based upon the average U.S. milk price in 1992 minus the average hauling, assessments and promotion charges. The average Holstein calf born in 1994 is expected to produce $416 more income per lactation than those cows born in 1985.

One of the reasons that the Holsteins are continuing to pull away from the rest of the breeds is due to the large selection population.

If we look at available data we see that the selective Holstein breeder can choose from among 79 bulls with a MFP$ over $260 whereas no Jersey bull meets this requirement.

The continual genetic improvement of the Holstein breed assures that it will continue to grow in importance in providing nutritious dairy products for generations to come.

Landowners To Meet

WATERFORD (Erie Co.) — The Pennsylvania Landowners' Association (PLA) is hosting an educational/informational meeting regarding abusive wetland regulations and other land use issues on March 15, 7 p.m. at the Farm and Home Center of Lancaster County.

PLA will offer a videotape presentation regarding wetlands and will also briefly address scenic river designations and their impacts upon land use.

Guest speaker for the meeting will be Congressman Tom Ridge (PA-21), who is co-author of H.R. 1330, the Comprehensive Wetlands Conservation and Management Act, which has been the most comprehensive and widely supported wetlands legislation introduced. "Comprehensive wetland reform is long over-due," stated Rhonda McAtee, PLA executive director.

"Landowners, both large and small, have suffered immeasurably from confiscatory wetland regulations and over zealous bureaucrats consumed with power," she said.

Bill Ellen, an environmental engineer and the government's latest wetland victim was sentenced in November of 1992 to 6 months in a federal penitentiary for creating waterfowl ponds on formerly dry land.

"This was property declared uplands until the bureaucrats, not our elected officials, took it upon themselves to add millions of acres to the wetland rosters by changing the definition of wetlands in 1989," McAtee stated. "Travesties such as this must stop," she said.

Congressman Ridge has recently announced his candidacy for governor in the 1994 election.

A question and answer period will be available for landowners and concerned citizens to ask the Congressman about his future agenda on property rights issues and his plans to bring regulatory agencies under control within the commonwealth.

The cost of the tour is $12 per person. No meal is included in the price. Lunch is to be brought along by each participant.

The deadline for reservation is March 9.

The first site to be visited is Delaware Valley College, in Doylestown. it has a herd averaging more than 26,500 pounds of milk and almost 1,000 pounds of fat. In addition to the Holstein herd, they also house Ayrshires, Brown Swiss and Jerseys. They have a freestall-parlor setup with a unique heifer barn.

At noon, the tour is to visit Keystone Farm, owned by the Donald Seipt family, in Easton. This herd is well known in Pennsylvania. They have bred an good "type" herd with a BAA of 108.6. Out of 90 head classified in December, 21 rated Excellent. However, the herd also produces, with a rolling herd average of about 25,000 pounds of milk.

At 2 p.m., the tour is to stop at Rothrock Golden Holsteins, in Kempton. At this farm, tour participants are to see many cattle representing family lineage to Leadman, including his dam, a number of siblings and their offspring.

Of note is the barn's ventilation system which includes water-cooled air. There's also a unique calf-raising facility.

The tour is to visit Hidden View Farm, in Robesonia, from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Hidden View is owned by Tim and Teresa Kissling, who have a number of cattle genetically tied to the Eric-Dew Mars Marcy family, and they have an outstanding Micheal daughter.

The herd produces an average of more than 25,000 pounds of milk. In addition to also showing their new calf and heifer raising facility, Tim Kissling is to discuss his nutritional consulting business.

The tour returns to the Farm and Home Center from Robesonia.

For a reservation, fill out a form and mail it and a check for $12 per person to: Stephen L. Hershey, 2661 Bossler Rd., Elizabethtown, 17022.

According to Kenneth Winebark, extension agent, the Agway award program is set up so that a $100 savings bond goes to the owner of the top bred and owned animal for each of the three respective animal species.

In addition, a $50 bond is awarded to the top three youth with owned and bred animals in the champion commercial market lamb, and champion commercial market swine contest and to the youth whose animal was judged reserve champion complete market animal.

Of the beef producers, Jon Harnish received a $100 savings bond for showing the champion bred and owned animal during the county fair.

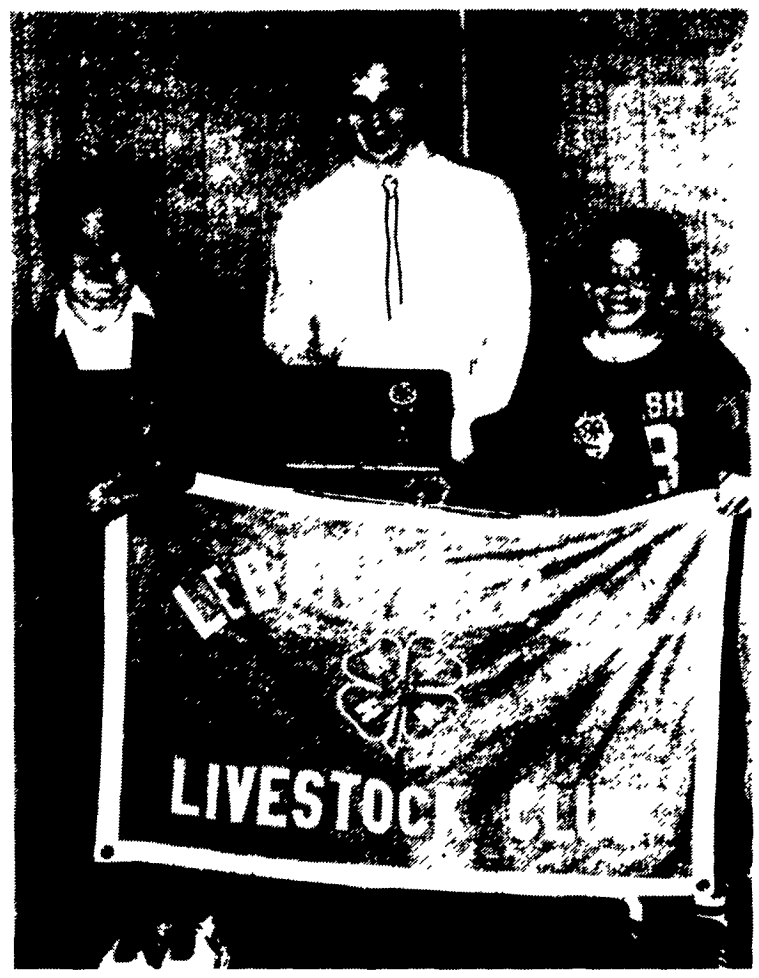
The awards are In the swine division, the bond recipients were Josh Heagy, Lydia Heagy and Roxanne Kirst. In the sheep division, it was Daniel Atkins, Wendy Atkins and Joe Tice.

In other awards, the outstanding rookie of the club was Nathanial Artz, 8, who as a first year member attended all the swine club meetings, participated in judging and showmanship and blocking at the county fair and showed two market hogs, a carcass hog and a Derby hog. He also showed a hogs at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition, two at the club's Winter Roundup, and one at the Farm Show.

In his spare time, he helped with a promotion at Fox's Market, At Dutchway, with the county Farm-City program, helped with the fair refreshment stand, barn cleanup, and painting the new pole barn at the fair grounds.

He also participated in a number of other related club events.

Receiving the club's Outstanding Junior Member Award was 11-year-old Jason Shirk. Jason was involved with beef and swine projects and participated heavily with his club's activities, showed animals and was also involved in school sports activities.



From the left, outstanding members of the Lebanon County 4-H Livestock Club are, from the Jason Shirk, Daniel Atkins and Nathanial Artz.

Daniel Atkins, 17, received the Outstanding Senior Member Award. Atkins was a member of the sheep, swine, and beef clubs, showing at the county fair, Farm Show, KILE, S.E. Pa. Hog Derby, the Eastern National Livestock Show at Timonium, Md., the Roundup and carcass show.

He had been breeding hogs, but stopped mid-May, but still continues his beef cattle breeding projects raising Charolois, and raising extra hogs from shows.

He has been involved in a number of judging contests, helped out with promotions, helped with fund raising and was a member of the champion pork bowl team.

Lancaster Dairy Days II Offers Range Of Tips

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Farmers who attended the second installment of Lancaster County Extension's Dairy Days program Tuesday were provided a variety of usable information for better managing their operations.

Lancaster County's annual offering has developed into a two-day affair. The first day, held Feb. 23, was practically identical to Lebanon County's program, held Feb. 24.

The second day for Lancaster is unique.

During the first program, featured was Paul Greenough, recently retired from the Western College of Veterinary Medicine in Saskatchewa, Canada. Greenough is an expert on cattle hoof structure, care, genetics, and management.

While his indepth and fact-filled talk comprised the majority of the first day's program, the second day for Lancaster County offered expert advice on a variety of practical dairy issues.

Arlyn "Jud" Heinrichs, with Penn State University, talked about the importance of feeding colostrum to calves during his talk on meeting the needs of growthy heifers.

According to Heinrichs, dairymen in the Northeast are doing the worst job, on a national basis, of getting the recommended amounts of antibiotics into the bloodstream of their calves.

He said that the study, done by pulling blood samples from a large number of calves, showed that blood serum levels of antibiotics were relatively low in calves in the Northeast, which is where many older cattle management techniques persist.

He said research has also shown that dairymen are doing a much better job of getting antibiotics into calves than they had been.

He said a study that looked at 80 percent of the dairy production industry showed that about 20 percent still manage raising calves in an unassisted manner, which Heinrichs said is of concern to him, because those calves are not getting the advantages of protection from life-threatening illnesses afford those calves which get from three to four quarts of high quality colostrum within the first 24 hours.

Heinrich talked about the variableness in quality of colostrum, from the standpoint of antibody levels.

In the past, experts have explained that in order to get the best care to a calf to minimize mortality, enough antibodies need to get to the linings of the intestinal tract to protect the wall from attack by bacteria and other destructive organisms.

The key to doing that is to get at least three quarts of colostrum into the belly of a newborn calf before the calf starts to lick and mouth different things.

While assisted feeding from the dam is an acceptable means for getting colostrum into a calf, it poses more potential problems, and in practice, more problems, than bottle or bucket feeding colostrum.

Though some animal rights activists and those who hold to "natural practice" philosophies have stated support for non-intervention in getting calves to get colostrum, all research data readily available shows that calves are healthier, perform better and have a higher chance of survival if they are given three to four quarts of high quality colostrum as soon as possible.

One researcher had expressed its importance as a life-and-death race between the farm manager getting the colostrum into the animal and the animal's intestinal tract being infested by bacteria and pathogens.

If the bacteria get there first, they do irreparable damage. If the antibodies get there first, within the first hours, they protect the intestinal lining, which is where the calves absorb nutrients.

There is a much greater chance of a calf becoming infested with pathogens before getting the protective colostrum if management is left to nature.

Heinrichs also suggested that herd managers also get and use an esophogeal tube to use in those instances when a calf is too weak to suckle properly from a bottle or bucket.

Though some unfamiliar with the technique of "force feeding" three or four quarts of colostrum to a calf may consider it to be an abuse of an animal, Heinrichs said it is far from that.

First of all, he said, the tube is inserted through the aid of the calf's natural sucking response. He said that if some colostrum is smeared around the exterior of the smooth end of the tube, the calf practically inserts the tube itself.

Heinrichs said there is truly no force used in force feeding colostrum with the esophogeal tubes.

The amount of colostrum is as important as the quality, for what the calf needs are high levels of antibodies in the colostrum. Heinrichs said that two or fewer quarts of colostrum within the first 24 hours are not enough to deliver the proper amount of protection.

"We have a fair number of calves at high risk because of low levels of antibodies," Heinrichs said, adding that research shows that as many as five out of every 10 calves in the Northeastern United States has low level of antibodies.

The survivability of calves which receive adequate levels of colostrum is higher. Another way to look at it is that the mortality rate of those calves not receiving adequate levels of colostrum is twice that of calves receiving at least adequate levels.

Heinrichs explained that the way colostrum works is that the first big amount of colostrum which goes in — three to four quarts during the first feeding, which should be within the first hours of the 24-hour period following birth — clots up into a protein and fat ball within the abumasum. The antibodies are more or less squeezed out and pass on to the intestines.

The longer the delay to get the colostrum into the animal, the less effective the treatment.

After 24 hours, it won't make a difference, because the intestinal walls won't use the antibodies.

Heinrichs said that while high quality colostrum is key to getting calves off to a good start, the best way to get good colostrum is to have a good management program for the dry cows so they are healthy and can make the antibody rich first milk.

For weaning, Heinrichs said that should be done within the first three to eight weeks. "They are ruminents. Feed them as ruminents, not as a (one-stomached) animal," Heinrichs said.

He suggested getting the on grain, water and then forage. In that order of importance.

He also said that as far as forage goes, the first feed should be of top palatability, especially the first hay offered.

"When you're feeding a calf, grab and squeeze the hay as hard as you can, and if have to pull slivers (of stem) out, its probably not going to like it."

For socialization, he also recommended the use of putting the animals in small groups of about equal age.

He said the first grouping experience "has a tremendous impact" on the social behavioral development of the animal. "The first experience has to be a good one," Heinrichs said, adding that farmers should especially be sure to provide a clean dry stall area with lots of ventilation.

For ration formulations, Heinrichs said that ration balancing should be done for four different stages in development — from weaning to six months age; from six months to breeding age; from breeding age to pre-calving; and then for pre-calving.

The matter of developing a pre-calving ration and making the transition to a milking diet, is probably the weakest area in current dairy farm management practice, he said.

The feed materials for dry matter should be tested, even if the material is being used because of poor quality. Heinrichs said this is so because it doesn't matter how bad the starting main ingredients are. What matters is knowing how much and what type of nutrients are included on a dry matter basis so that a ration can be balanced to the nutrient level the animal needs.

Also, despite some recent claims that research is immenent that would show that a dairy herd can be pushed to grow to full adult size and calve when 18 months to 22 months of age, Heinrichs said that was a mistake.

"We know that growing too fast before puberty can cause long term affects on mammary growth and development," he said.

Other problems are caused, especially laminitis, which is a result of high levels of lactic acid in the animals bloodstream which most commonly is directly related to the ration.

Also talking during the dairy day were James Ferguson, from University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center in Kennett Square, who is heavily involved with practical dairy research; and David Galligan, also from New Bolton, who has been looking at old problems in some new ways, such as the actual follow-up results to cows that had corrective surgery for a displaced abomasum.

Ferguson talked about his work on using prostaglandin injections on a repeated 14-day cycle to do a better job of breeding back cattle and being in a position to make culling decisions for other problems, such as dairy production.

His presentation has been reported previously in Lancaster Farming.

Also during the dairy day, a panel discussion was held which was comprised of three farmers and a nutritionist for a Franklin County feed cooperative association. The topic for the panel was working with a nutritionist to maximize profits.

Delaware Council Of Farm Organizations Sets Meeting

DOVER, Del. — Jeanne Robertson, a 6-2 former Miss North Carolina with a cache of "tall tales" will bring her seven-step plan for developing a sense of humor to the 23rd Annual Agricultural Industry Dinner on Saturday, March 20th.

The event will be held at the University of Delaware's Clayton Hall in Newark. This annual gathering enables farmers, agribusinessmen and policy makers a chance to discuss issues facing agriculture in the year ahead.

Author and humorist Robertson has been speaking professionally since 1963. What began as a necessity when she became Miss North Carolina, grew into a hobby and eventually a career.

Robertson has a degree from Auburn University and taught physical education in high school and college and coached basketball for many years. But, it was apparent that people enjoyed her humorous style of speaking more than anything.

She became a member of the National Speakers Association and was elected president in 1985-86. She was presented with the Association's Cavett Award in 1989, the NAS's most prestigious honor. She was the first woman to receive the honor.

Her self-deprecating humor elicits laughter, but her message inspires all of us to accept outselves and others for what they are and to have the confidence to succeed in life.

Robertson appeared at the annual Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. banquet several years ago.

Tickets for the Ag Industry Dinner are $75 each. Price includes a cocktail hour from 6 to 7 p.m., dinner and an ice cream social.

The dinner is sponsored by the Delaware Council of Farm Organizations, a non-profit association of representatives from the state's major agricultural commodity groups and organizations.

For tickets and/or information please call Brenda Winchell at (302) 739-4811 or 1-800-282-8685.

Maxima Sets World Record

This photo of the new world record milk-making cow Tullando Royalty Maxima was published in the Holstein Association News, a newsletter of the national Holstein Association. She made 58,952 pounds of milk in one year.

pounds of fat and 1,230 pounds of protein in the Tullar herd.

Tullando Admiral Van, Maxima's sixth dam made a 305-day record with 22,530 pounds of milk and 808 pounds of fat (3.6 percent) in her first lactation, which began in 1966.

Veronica, the seventh dam, made 19,480 pounds of 3.5 percent milk in 294 days in 1963. And in 1949, the tenth dam made 19,236 pounds of 3.7 percent milk in 305 days.

As for type, the dam and grandam were both Very Good.

The great-grandam, Tullando Cal Meg, was Nancy Tullar's first show calf, she too, scored 85. Maxima's sixth dam, Tullando Admiral Van, shown by Deborah Tullar at Eastern States Exposition, was named grand champion cow in 1966; she was scored 87.

The tenth and eleventh dam in the pedigree were scored 85 and 87, respectively.

Maxima is more than a genetic aberration. She and her family are an integral part of the Tullando Farm heritage.

Dairy Farmers Are Businessmen

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Dairylea Cooperative Inc. and Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association Inc. held two educational meetings this week on milk marketing for members within the Federal Order No. 2 region.

The meetings were part of four held jointly by the cooperatives on issues which affect milk marketing. On Wednesday one was held at the Holiday Inn, in Grantville, and on Thursday one was held at the Guthrie Inn and Conference Center in Sayre.

Two other meetings are scheduled for members in the New York area. On March 22, a meeting is scheduled to be helde at the Best Western Inn in Cobleskill, N.Y. On March 23, a meeting is to be held at the Ramada Inn, in Watertown, N.Y.

At each meeting several presentations were made. Joe Mathis, assistant general manager of Eastern, and Cliff Carman, vice president of exonomics and policy analysis for Dairylea, provided their views on policy toward federal regulation and management within the F.O. No.2 milkshed, which draws from a number of farms in Pennsylvania.

Also different between the New York and this week's Pennsylvania meeting are the speakers from the respective land grant universities whose extension services provide industry support.

For the upcoming New York meetings, Dr. Andy Novakovic, of Cornell University spoke. At the Pennsylvania meetings, the Penn State University speaker was Dr. Robert Yonkers, agricultural economist.

Carman and Mathis addressed issues which were outlined in the newsletter published for the cooperative F.O. No.2 area, Newsline.

In his talk, Yonkers said that there isn't a large difference between the dairy production statistics for Pennsylvania and New York, and both areas are affected by similar trends.

According to Yonkers, that trend is toward fewer yet larger farms with fewer head of cattle and a higher average production per cow.

He said that during the past decade, New York and Pennsylvania lost 30 percent of the dairy farms. However, that has not made any significant affect on the amount of milk produced each year.

According to Yonkers, the amount continues to rise, with Pennsylvania having made som significant gains over New York during the past decade, to compare favorably.

The continued trend for the industry is most likely for continued fewer farms, Yonkers said. However, he said that pockets of dairy farms will probably emerge as the support industry and the dairy farmers continue to receive pressure and become even more interdependent.

However, Yonkers said the area should stay strong for dairy because of its proximiy to markets and because of the numbers of processors int he area (another market).

And while Yonkers predicted that clusters of dairy farms will emerge, he also said he sees some area where dairy farms will disapear.

He said it is important for dairymen to realize what likely is the local future trend before sinking a lot of money into improving a farm for dairy production. He said that proximity to support services is almost as important as land price when it comes time to decide what farm design has the most value in an area, especially for resale.

Yonkers said that before making large expansion at any particular farm, producers must be honest with the outlook of how fast any farm improvements would pay off, and what kind of affect the construction would have on resalability.

He said that to invest heavily on improving a farm for dairy production in an area where there is no support services or costs for regular services are higher because of distances traveled, etc., it to through away money.

"Does (investment in the farm) increase the value of that farm 10 years from now?" Yonkers said. He said that unless the answer is "yes," farmers should be careful about expanding. He said that while this doesn't mean that farmers shouldn't expand their operations, they should look at the trends in their immediate area to decide whether they can profitably expand in their existing area, or if they may want to relocated to a farm located in an area with a strong support service framework.

Johnson Keeps ADADC Presidency

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Raymond Johnson was re-elected as president of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) after the 33nd Annual Meeting held on Feb. 16 at the Sheraton Inn in Syracuse, New York.

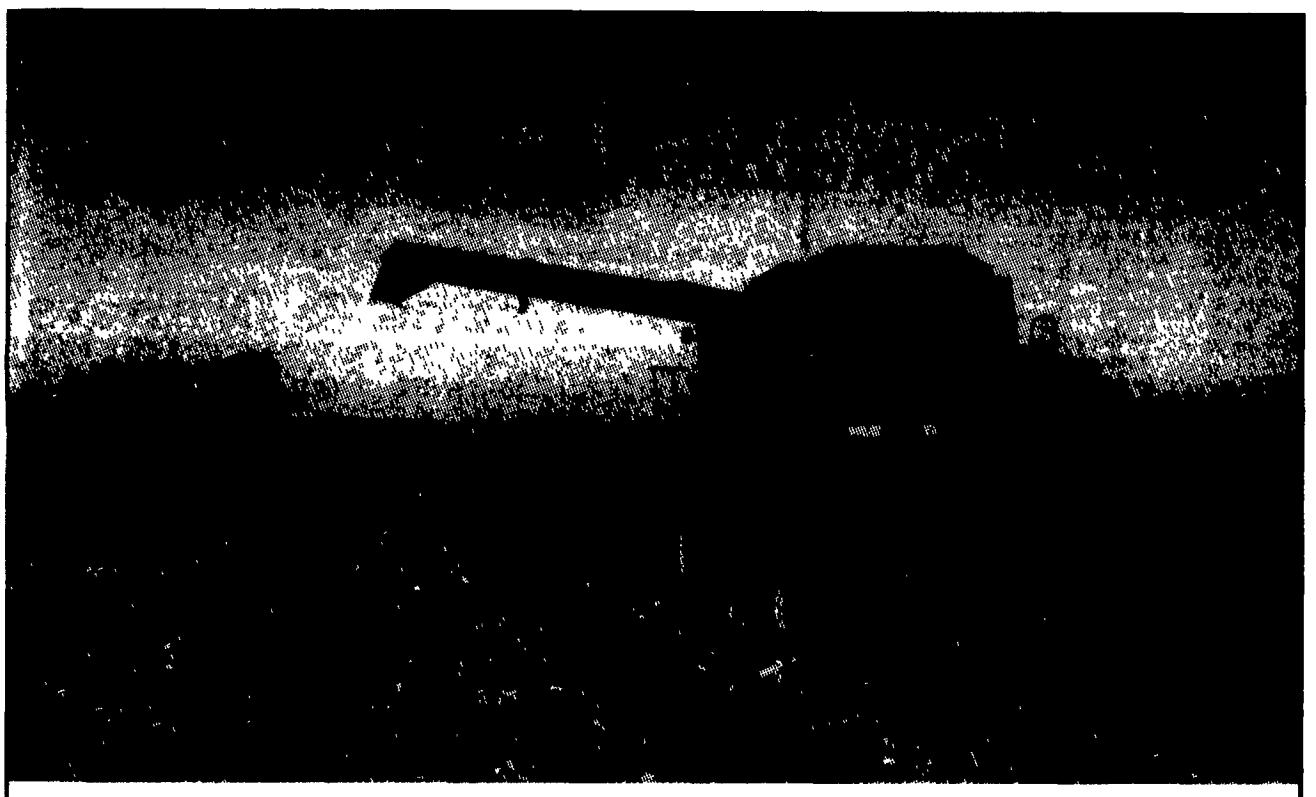
Johnson, a dairy farmer from Schaghticoke, N.Y., starts his eleventh year as president of ADADC's board. In partnership with his son Edward, Johnson operates a 530-acre farm with Holstein cattle.

The ADADC Annual Meeting is held each February. Dairy producers representing New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania meet in order to elect officers and review the advertising and promotion programs implemented by ADADC during 1992.

This year the presentation was done in a sports broadcast style.

Also elected were: vice president, K. Allen Roszel of Montrose; second vice president, Paul Kirsch of Varysburg, N.Y.; treasurer, Robert Harrison of Skaneateles, N.Y.; and secretary, David Hardie of Lansing, N.Y.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. is a dairy promotion organization which represents dairy producers from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

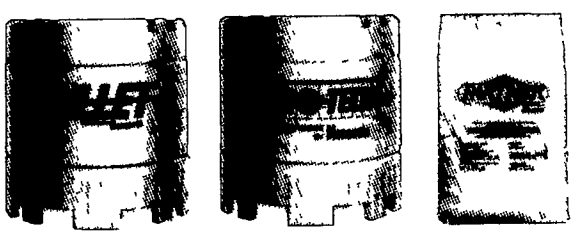


Earlier Bullet®, Micro-Tech® and Partner® are your best choices for time-saving early pre-plant applications because they time-release their active ingredient to extend control. • Apply Bullet, Micro-Tech or Partner up to 30 days prior to planting, you'll spread out your workload.

Stronger Bullet, Micro-Tech and Partner are strong performers in high residue because encapsulation protects them three ways. • First, they lose less power to volatilization on the residue. • Second, more herbicide penetrates the residue. • Third, more herbicide stays locked into the weed zone ~ even after heavy rains.

Longer Timed-release action means Bullet, Micro-Tech and Partner outlast ordinary herbicides for longer control. • They're easy on the crop early when it's most vulnerable and tough on weeds all season long.

Get Earlier, Stronger, Longer Performance With Bullet, Micro-Tech and Partner.



Choose Bullet, the only encapsulated pre-mix, to stop over 32 weeds and grasses on your toughest high residue and no-till corn acres. • For grass and small-seeded broadleaf control in clean-till to no-till corn or soybeans, Micro-Tech is the choice. • And to combine the grass control performance of encapsulation with the convenience of an easy-mixing dry formulation, go with Partner. • See us soon or call 1-800-332-3111 for a free brochure

National Holstein Plans Winter Forum

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — As part of a national network of winter forum meetings coast-to-coast, Pennsylvania Holstein breeders are invited to talk with national directors of the Holstein Association and others at two March meetings.

All Holstein members are encouraged to attend and the meeting are set to be of best geographical convenience.

For those in the western part of Pennsylvania, a meeting is scheduled for 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, March 10, at the Days Inn, in Butler. The hotel telephone number is (412) 287-6761.

For those in the central and eastern part of the state, a meeting is set for 9:30 a.m., Thursday, March 11, at the Holiday Inn, in Grantville, located along Rt. 81.

John Selz, vice president of the Holstein Association, and owner of Selz Farm, in Humbird, Wis., is to attend the forums. A veteran breeder of registered Holsteins, he has 10 years experience on the national board of directors. He is to talk about genetics, finances and other association issues.

Pat Henry, manager of special projects for the association, is to discuss DHIA-DHIR and innovative identification options, such as sketchless registry.

Pennsylvania Holstein field representatives Clarence Stauffer and Tom Dum are to review aspects of the new qualified Holstein herdbook system.

Tom Kelly and John Howard, who are national directors representing Pennsylvania, are also to address the members.

Ken Raney, director of member services for the state association, is to provide an update on the local qualified Holstein herdbook system.

Bank Forms Ag Board

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — Mid-State Bank has formed an Agricultural Associate Board to focus exclusively on the unique financial needs of the farming community, announced William J. Rossman, president and chief executive officer.

Rossman said, "We recognize the vital role the agricultural community plays in a stable economic environment. As a provider of financial products and services, our responsibility lies in helping our farming customers maintain high quality and profitable operations by meeting their financial needs. The challenge to us, then, is first to identify those key needs characteristic of the farming industry. We've addressed a way to recognize those needs by joining together a broad cross-section of experts from the farming sector who understand farming and are in touch with the pulse of the farm community on a day-to-day basis."

Obie Snider, Singing Brook Farms, serves as chairman of the Agricultural Associate Board. Other members are David A. Morrow, DVM, Ph.D; Bette B. Slayton, Slayton at Falklands; Fred A. Strouse, Kissinger Leonard & Brower Realtors; G. Joel Wineland, Wineland Equipment, Inc.; and another farming representative.

Mary Ann Keith, agricultural administrator, will manage the Bank's agricultural lending department. Keith is a graduate of Penn State University, where she earned a bachelor's degree in dairy and animal science, with a business option.

Keith said, "I feel the farming customer needs a banking specialist who knows and understands the special requirements in running a successful farming operation — one who talks their language. By developing a total banking relationship with the agricultural client's needs in mind, we can provide a wide range of banking products and services: lending, leasing, trust services, deposits, and Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs). When a farming operation depends on harvesting the crop during daylight hours, it's difficult to get to the bank. Because our banking philosophy is based on finding solutions for our customers' needs, we'll go one step further and take the bank to our customers — even if it means doing business after normal banking hours. And we'll offer assistance with federal, state, and local loan programs and services, as well as educational seminars, as value-added services to the farm customer."

Keith said, "Being a good neighbor is helping the farm community grow the food and fiber we need. But without funds to buy seed and livestock, or loans to make capital improvements, our farming neighbors would be hard-pressed to sustain production at maximum profit and efficiency. As a responsible corporate citizen, Mid-State Bank is committed to providing the resources and personalized services to serve our neighbors throughout the agricultural community with the best banking possible."

WORKING TOGETHER

The Harvestore Feed Storage Structure

Livestock farmers have been working with the Harvestore structure since 1949. It's an important relationship because a Harvestore structure can do nothing on its own, but working together, you can make it one of the most important pieces of equipment you own.

Working together, you can use your Harvestore structure to contribute to improved livestock feed efficiency. Working together, you can use your Harvestore structure to help save time. And working together, you can use your Harvestore structure for a positive impact on your farm's production costs for milk, beef or pork.

Working together.

Now's the time to discover how successful Harvestore structure owners have improved their production results.

Harvestore Feed Storage Structures are available in several models. They are recommended for storing grain at moisture levels of 22 to 35%, and for storing forage at moisture levels of 40 to 55%.

Berks Quilts Show Heritage Of Colors

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

READING (Berks Co.) — Most of the quilts in the quilt show at the Berks County Historical Society have histories as colorful as they are.

The show, titled "Design and Color — Quilted in Berks," highlights the best and most original quilts the society discovered during the Quilt Harvest in the last two years.

The harvest was concerned with documenting quilts made in Berks County before 1940. The work will continue, said P. Allison duPont, project coordinator, because as word spread about the harvest, she discovered that at least double the number of items already documented actually exist.

Most amazing about the more than 1,400 quilts brought to the harvest held in schools around the county was the vibrant colors, duPont said.

"What we were looking for were aspects that are unique to Berks County," she said as she led a visitor around the display on two floors of the society at 940 Centre Ave.

Bright, vibrant colors are evident in the cotton quilts displayed on the first and second floor of the society.

Several starburst quilts are featured on the second floor, where there also is set up a community quilt. Anyone is welcome to sit down at the quilt designed by Melissa Horn and stretched on a frame and sew for as long as they like.

While doing this they can contemplate the meticulous detail used in the quilts hanging on the walls around them, done in starburst patterns. Their colors literally jump out of the backgrounds. In particular, a quilt made around 1890 by Elizabeth Harting Sweigart shows an eight-point, multicolored star bursting out of a royal blue background. Another, featuring a "star-within-a-star" pattern, made by Edna Mutter Ellis of Boyertown about 1930, shows typical colors of the Depression — blues and oranges.

"These starburst quilts are so typically Berks County and Pennsylvania Dutch," duPont said. "You can see the exuberance of them."

One particular color theme that has recurred in quilts duPont has seen is an orange color she calls "cheddar cheese." A bright, cheesy orange is the background on which are appliquied designs in maroon and forest green.

Several of the quilts feature this color of orange.

Many of the patterns were traded back and forth, duPont explained. But sometimes women would design their own, unique patterns.

Such was the case with Mahella Rhodes Wolfgang, who lived in Earl Township from the late 1800s until her death in 1940. Mahella

P. Allison duPont, coordinator of the quilt harvest project and show at the Berks County Historical Society in Reading, explains that women in the latter part of the last century often painstakingly quilted their undergarments and hats.

DuPont points out that although each of the quilts discovered during the quilt harvest is unique, many follow the same patterns using blocks enclosing a colorful pattern or stylized design of flowers.

apparently designed what she called her "cactus" quilt — dark green zig-zagged leaves on a "double blue" background. The centers of the "cacti" have a yellow star from which LeMoyne star type flowers branch out.

This pattern was chosen as the logo for the Quilt Harvest.

DuPont explained that Mahella's flair for quilting was passed down from her mother, a quilter who lived in nearby Shanesville. Mahella's daughter, Lizzie, also joined in quilting at the tender age of 6 and continued the craft for many years.

Quilts of the Victorian era, also displayed on the second floor, are much different from the earlier, cotton quilts. "Crazy quilts" were much in vogue then, said duPont, and they featured darker colors, often using silk, wool from men's suits, and store-bought appliquis.

Of particular interest is the "cigar band" quilt, made by Jennie Sittler of Boyertown about 1870. Sittler's parents had a general store, duPont said, and when she was 15, she started collected the yellow silk ties that bound the cigar bundles.

If you look carefully at it, carefully tucked away from prying hands in a glass case, you can see a definite pattern incorporated the dozens of names of cigars imprinted on the bands.

"It's the only one we've seen," duPont said, noting that she knows of only two others in the United States. But duPont didn't know about this one until Mary Bamberger of Boyertown brought it to the harvest. It was since donated to the society.

The oldest documented quilt is also made of silk around 1836. It was made by Catherine Doll for her wedding to Dr. William Moore of Womelsdorf.

In addition to quilts, the harvest also uncovered other items quilted by Berks County women — crib quilts (called "smalls"), "granny balls," bonnets, and petticoats.

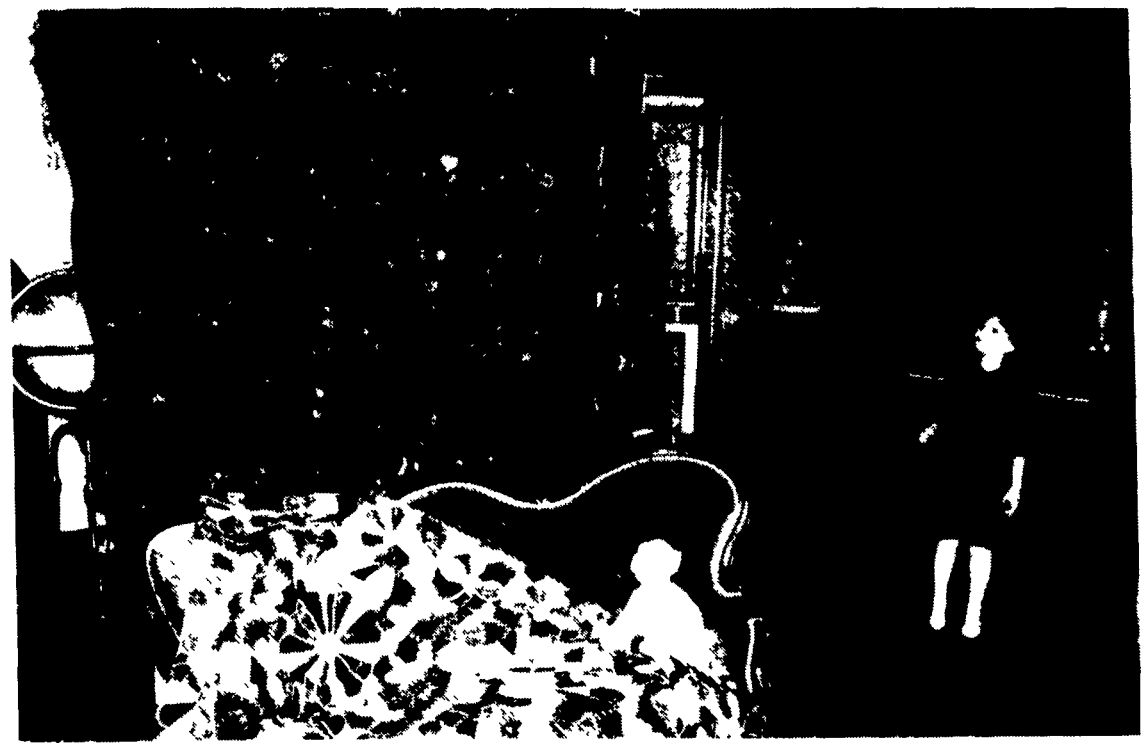
DuPont is amazed that undergarments show they were painstakingly quilted — even a pieced pocket which women wore under their dresses shows it was quilted. Same with a plain, gray bonnet commonly worn outside shows fanciful stitching.

"They took the time to quilt these things," she said. "But they could have just been plain."

All of these aspects of quilting show each woman's need to express herself, duPont explained. After taking care of the house, and baking, cooking, gardening, and doing laundry, quilting was a way for women to relax and express their creativity.

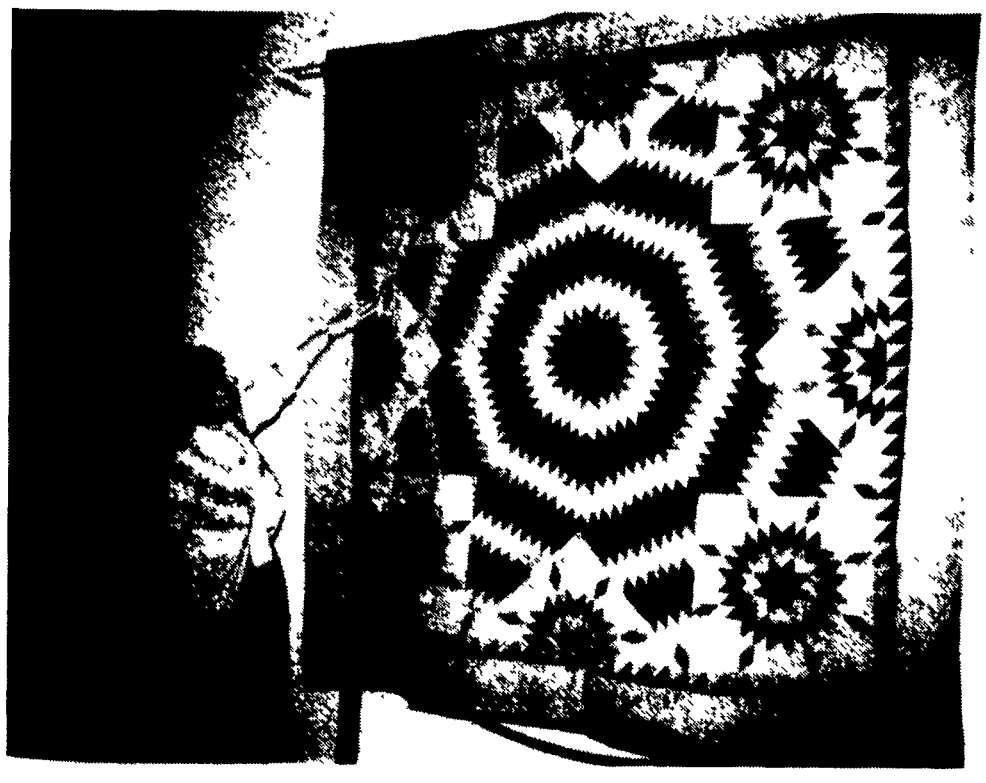
"We're preserving and honoring this facet of women's heritage," said Gail Dawson-White, director of corporate involvement with Penn Savings Bank, a chief sponsor of the harvest.

The show runs through June 26 on Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is a $2.50 admission charge.



Several "crazy quilts" are displayed in the Victorian room of the historical society. A typical crazy quilt, which became fashionable in the 1870s, featured fabric in a variety of colors, irregular shapes and sizes. These quilts were made by sewing fabric "scraps" to a lightweight foundation, usually with the raw edges turned under and held in place with a variety of fancy embroidery stitches.

DuPont stands with a display honoring Mahella Wolfgang, a quilter who lived in eastern Berks County and whose "Cactus" design is unique among all the quilts catalogued in the harvest. Wolfgang's design is used as the logo for the quilt harvest.



This is one of the best star burst design quilts in the show. With its vibrant colors, the quilt is typical of the exuberant Pennsylvania Dutch designs found in the Berks County quilts.

Homestead Notes

Rush The Season By Forcing Shrubs

YORK (York Co.) — Just when you've given up on your frozen garden and decided to tough it out until spring, it's time to think about forcing garden shrubs. This is a marvelous way to rush the season.

The buds of early-flowering, woody plants were formed in the fall. They will terminate their dormancy period when they are exposed to warmth and moisture after at least six weeks of cold temperatures.

That innocuous-looking pussy willow, forsythia, quince, maple, hickory can be brought to early bloom indoors. Fruit trees, such as apple, peach, or plum may also be plucked for the same reason. Other dead-looking vines, such as clematis, ivy and honeysuckle can be brought to leaf, if not bloom, to add a hint of new growth to your winter living room.

Here's how to do it. Collect branches ranging from one and a half to the three feet from any spring-flowering tree or shrub in late February or March. Cut branches carefully with a sharp knife or pruning tool to avoid injury. Make sure the branches you cut will not be missed when the tree flowers in the spring.

Bring the cut branches indoors and place the cut ends of the stems in water. Store the bucket in a low-light spot with a temperature of about 60 to 65 degrees F. Mist the flower buds several times a day as they start to open. As they become more plump, they will need additional light for the colors to develop.

When the branches are well developed and color is set, your spring-flowering branches are ready for display. Store in cooler rooms at night to make your arrangements last longer.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

After playing games with us there for several weeks, Winter finally got serious.

In a teasing, hide-n-seek mood, Winter would kinda' pop its chilly head around a corner, yell "Gotcha!" with a brief blast of snow or freezing drizzle, and then disappear in a cloud of damp fog.

Mother Nature must have grabbed her errant Winter by the collar and told it to shape up. One step out the door confirms that Winter has indeed behaved more normally recently and put warm weather on ice. In fact, lots of stuff has been put on ice. Or under it. Or enveloped in it.

After being open much of the last several weeks, layers of ice and snow have combined to still the waters of the meadow ponds.

Much of the surface of the larger pond is coated with an opaque layer of ice, erratically marked with dark, jagged streaks. Only around the upper edge, near the underground spring which feeds the pond's flow, is there open water for the visiting mallards.

Several years have passed since optimal conditions existed for skating on the pond. It takes about ten days of consistent sub-freezing temperatures to freeze to the four inches or so we insist on for skating. And the best ice is of just frozen water; snow mixed in, like this year, roughens the surface.

Crystal fringes decorate the edges of the dairy barn, adding a sort of gingerbread architectural effect to its utilitarian design. When heat from the sun and the herd combine to loosen the ice/snow accumulation from the barn's sloping roof, the roar inside hints at the horrendous thundering that must go up from a major mountain avalanche.

It's as close as I ever care to get to one of those, thank you.

We get the same effect at the house sometimes, but ending with a tinkling sound if the edge of the cascade tumbles onto the very end of the greenhouse below. A wide board or even cardboard laid over that last row of glass during a thaw is cheap insurance.

Ice sculptures ornament the landscape around the calf nursery and outside "condo" pens. These aren't the ornate type formed by an ice artist with chisel and hammer, but rather dumpy-looking lumps shaped like drinking water buckets.

Often I'll line the bucket shapes up in the flower border, where they slowly melt and release their moisture around the roots of the roses and the perennials. It grows great weeds. But at least the melt doesn't ooze down the sloped driveway to refreeze into an ice slick by dark.

For the fields, a layer of icy snow is a blessed protective blanket.

The white coating maintains a more even temperature on the soil beneath, preventing the freezing and thawing that heaves plant root systems out of the ground. And with soil not frozen deeply beneath the snow covering, the snow should seep in as it melts, watering plant roots and replenishing groundwaters.

Fall-planted small grains, like wheat and barley, always look so much greener after being sheltered under a blanket of snow. Poor man's fertilizer, I've heard snow called.

While ice is pretty on ponds and snow cover beneficial to fields, there are places we could do without it. Like the garage.

Returning home late one bitterly cold night, I climbed out of the car and promptly found myself sitting on the garage floor. Snow-slush had earlier melted from under the car, puddled on the concrete floor and frozen into a slick glaze.

Spring? Yoo hoo, are you out there, Spring?

Extension Banquet Credits Volunteers

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Displays by the Chaneysville 4-H Community Club and the Shawnee Lakers 4-H Club added color and warmth to a cold February night for the annual Bedford County extension banquet.

Two speakers from Penn State University, Don Evans, assistant dean of extension and Harold Ott, central region director of the College of Agricultural Sciences gave brief remarks.

Evans said that the "quality of life programs" are a very vital part of extension. He also credited the many volunteers involved in extension. "Extension could not survive without the many volunteers who are involved," he said.

Harold Ott emphasized the need for volunteers by noting the budget cuts that have been made throughout the state.

"We did not have an entire statewide hiring freeze," Ott said. "We have one county in the state that has no extension staff. Without support from the state, we cannot fill the vacancies and the programs suffer because of this."

Sue Fox, Bedford County extension agent, showed that, despite a reduced staff, Bedford County has continued to have an active program.

She pointed out some of the most successful programs during the past year have emphasized family values. "209 familes attended our family night," she said.

Dave Cole, a financial advisor, had been welcomed with advice as he spoke to the farmers who pump $38.5 million into the county economy each year.

Kids in Control and Therapeutic Horseback Riding are two other highly successful programs.

"This summer," Fox said, "extension will be able to hire 12 college students through JPTA to help with ongoing community 4-H clubs and their projects.

Dottie Bromley, a retiree from the board, received a certificate of appreciation from Wayne Koontz, president.

Other board members elected at the February meeting included Betty Kegg, Pam Hershberger, Karen Kreigle, and Brian Woy.

New Beef Recipes

CHICAGO, ILL. — A good way to build beef sales is to increase consumer knowledge of beef cookery. Through a new checkoff-funded education program called, "Counter Intelligence: A Marketer's Guide to the Meat Department," retailers are taught basic kitchen skills that they can pass on to the people they work with on a regular basis — the consumer.

"Counter Intelligence" reflects recent beef industry research that suggests consumers enjoy cooking, but often lack kitchen know-how to add a variety of beef meals to their menu. The industry's national Cooking Skills and Knowledge Study found that consumers fix an average of 10 meals at home each week and are most comfortable with simple stove-top or oven preparation techniques.

"Counter Intelligence" explores different cooking methods and teaches retailers that beef can be prepared in a variety of tasty dishes that will appeal to a strong cross section of consumers, which will help build beef sales. The program explores how to select proper beef cuts, emphasizing convenient dinners. It includes a 27-minute instructional video and accompanying 70-page handbook, eight retail employee pocket guides, an order blank for additional materials and two colorful beef meal posters for meat case displays.

Food Safety After School

From front door . . . to refrigerator door, the favorite afternoon pastime of school children remains "snacking." But what if mom or dad is not home to make the snack? What's a hungry kid to do? It's been estimated that roughly seven million American kids either care for themselves after school or are cared for by a sibling. What are the most important food and kitchen safety facts you should teach your children? Read on for a crash course in "Safe Snacking."

While most older youngsters can easily prepare their own snack, it is critically important to educate them about the larger issues of food and kitchen safety. In fact, you should establish basic "Kitchen Rules" and consider putting them in writing. And always keep on hand a ready supply of snacks that you know your child can easily handle alone.

Whether your child chooses a cold snack, a ready-to-eat snack, a do-it-yourself snack or a hot snack, it is never too early to teach children about the importance of clean hands, utensils, and other basic food safety techniques. Here's a basic beginner's course written so both you and your youngsters can read it.

Kids, For Food Safety

1. Place books or bookbags on the floor, not on eating counters or the kitchen table.

2. Throw away leftover sandwiches or other "refrigerate type" foods you bring home from school.

3. Wash your hands before you make or eat a snack. Hands carry lots of germs.

4. Always use clean spoons, forks and plates.

5. Wash fruits and vegetables with water before you eat them.

6. Do not eat bread, cheese or soft fruits or vegetables that look bad or have even small spots of mold.

7. Do not leave cold items, like milk, lunchmeat, hardcooked eggs or yogurt out on the counter at room temperature. Put these foods back in the refrigerator as soon as you have fixed your snack.

But what if your children want a hot snack? Should you let your child use the microwave? According to a recent Good Housekeeping/International Microwave Power Institute study, children are frequent users of the household microwave. Fifty-two percent of the respondents said that their children under the age of 12 use the microwave. The average age at which children begin to use the microwave is 7. In general, parents perceive the microwave oven to be a safe cooking appliance. For this reason, they let children use the microwave, but not a gas or an electric range.

However, you should know that severe burns can and do occur from improper microwave useage. Special packaging for kids' favorite foods like popcorn, pizza and french fries can get too hot for kids to handle. Steam from popcorn bags can burn the eyes, face, arms, and hands. Jelly donuts, pastries, hot dogs and other foods can reach scalding temperatures in seconds. The U.S. Product Safety Commission estimated that nearly 1,300 children under the age of 15 suffered microwave-related burns last year. If you give permission for your child to use the microwave, start by holding a Saturday morning training session. It is recommended that only children who can read be allowed to use the microwave.

Four-H Builds Skills, Confidence

NEWARK, Del. — Traditionally, 4-H was an organization for rural children, but in recent decades it has expanded its focus to include urban and suburban youth in its programming. Its primary goal is to help young people develop into productive members of their communities by building self-esteem and confidence. 4-H also gives youth an opportunity to succeed through positive experiences, says Ted Palmer, University of Delaware Kent County 4-H agent.

Cooperative Extension, with a grant from the Delaware Housing Authority, is sponsoring two 4-H programs at McLane Gardens in Smyrna.

Weekly meetings are held in the community activity building. Barbara Frazier, Extension program aide, delivers the 4-H curriculum with the help of adult and teen volunteers from McLane Gardens.

"The kids look forward to the meetings," Frazier says. "When they see my car in the parking lot, they all start coming."

Frazier meets with 8- to 12-year-olds to work on activities from "Exploring 4-H." This program allows the children to sample a variety of 4-H projects including foods, sewing and citizenship activities. As children continue with 4-H they can focus on their favorite projects.

The aide conducts a separate program for 5- to 7-year-olds using the 4-H program "About You and Me." This program is designed to build confidence and develop self-esteem. At a recent meeting, the theme was friendship and sharing. The children sang songs about friendship and discussed favorite playtime activities that involved friends.

To illustrate the benefits of sharing, Frazier distributed bags of various snacks including gummy bears, raisins and cereal O's to each child. The children learned that by combining the varieties of treats in a common bowl and then redistributing a cupful to each child, they all had a taste of every snack.

For information on joining 4-H or becoming an adult volunteer, contact your country Extension office.

Tree Management

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — "Managing Community Trees: Keeping the Old and Nurturing the New" is the second workshop of the Pennsylvania Urban and Community Forestry Program in the southeastern region. It will be held at the Montgomery County 4-H Center in Creamery, on Thursday, March 11. Highlights of the workshop include: basics of tree physiology, mature tree care, hazard tree evaluation, a hands on tree pruning demonstration, liability of community trees, and utility pruning.

Early registration must be received by March 1. Cost, including lunch and all workshop materials, is $22. After March 1, the registration cost is $25. For more information concerning the workshop, contact the Montgomery County Cooperative Extension Office, 1015 Route 113, P.O. Box 20, Creamery, PA 19430; phone (215) 489-4315.

Dried Beef Favorites

Old Fashioned Dried Beef is great to eat plain, but it also offers delicious variety for use in casseroles, dips, sandwiches, snacks, and breakfast recipes.

Dried beef is a Pennsylvania Dutch specialty that continues to be made and consumed by areas around Lancaster and Philadelphia.

Many meat packers no longer make old-fashioned dried beef because it takes 10 to 11 weeks to cure and air dry it. Many packers now cut the meat into chunks and use needles to shoot the cure into it and process it in bologna-like tubes. It is still called dried beef but the words chunked or reformed are marked on the packages.

But, for those who grew up with the old-fashioned type, it is much preferred. One of the few companies which continues to make the old-fashioned variety is Knauss of Quakertown.

The Knauss Company buys the leanest beef to cure for about nine weeks. Nothing used in the cure is artificial. After the curing period, the meat is air dried at 155 degrees for four to five days until it loses enough weight to be called dried beef. It is then sliced paper thin or packaged for sale.

Here are delicious recipes from our readers and from Knauss, the dried beef specialists.

Naturally-cured dried beef may be eaten plain or combined with other ingredients for use in casseroles, sandwiches, dips, hors d' oeuvres, or breakfast foods.

New Tastes For New Times

Here's food for thought: Americans are eating lighter and they're eating healthier, experts say. Recent studies by Family Circle magazine show 81 percent of Americans have changed the way they cook in the last three to five years; 91 percent are concerned about nutrition labeling on food. At the same time, the surveys show, we want our meals to be tasty — and quick to prepare, since we don't have much time to spend in the kitchen.

Here is a recipe from a new cookbook that's likely to meet the needs of those for whom health, taste and time are all top priorities. Called The Family Circle Cookbook: New Tastes for New Times (Simon & Schuster, $23.00), it brings a storehouse of information and inspiration to those who cook every day and are in need of recipes that are above all, varied, convenient and healthful.

Stir-Fried Chicken With Cashews And Green Onion

1 egg white
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons reduced-sodium soy sauce
1 pound boneless, skinned chicken breasts, cubed
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon dry sherry
OR: chicken broth
½ cup unsalted cashews
3 tablespoons peanut oil OR: sesame oil
⅓ cup sliced green onion
¼ teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes

1. Mix together egg white, the 1 tablespoon cornstarch and 1 tablespoon soy sauce in small bowl. Add chicken; stir to coat all pieces. Let stand 15 minutes.

2. Stir together sugar, chicken broth, sherry, the remaining 1 teaspoon cornstarch and remaining 1 tablespoon soy sauce in small bowl until smooth.

3. Saute' cashews in 1 tablespoon oil in large skillet or wok over medium heat until lightly browned on all sides. Remove and reserve.

4. Drain chicken mixture in strainer. Heat remaining 2 tablespoons oil in skillet. Add chicken; stir-fry over medium-high heat until browned on all sides, stirring constantly. Add green onion and pepper flakes; stir-fry 30 seconds longer.

5. Stir chicken broth mixture again; add to skillet along with cashews. Cook until mixture is bubbly and thickened.

Chester County Cooperative Extension Agent Cheryl Fairbairn, left, presents the Donald Nichols family with a plaque for Outstanding Family of the Year at a recent meeting of the Pennsylvania Angus Association. The award was given in recognition of the family's service to the Angus Association. Also shown are Don and Judy Nichols, Will, age 4, and John, age 10.

Nichols Become Family Of Year

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Angus Association recently named Don Nichols, his wife Karen, and their two sons, John and Will, Outstanding Family of the Year. The award was given in recognition of the family's service to the Angus Association.

According to Association Secretary-Treasurer Chuck Chapman, the Nichols family helps with the annual Angus sale at Penn State's Beef Expo, the Pennsylvania Angus Breeders Show in July, and provides cattle for the Ag Progress Days Angus exhibit.

The family's Angus herd has been recognized for performance. Ten-year-old John will show cattle at the July breeder's show for the third time this summer, and Will, age 4, for the second year. Chapman said the family contributes many long hours making sure everything is ready for the show at Centre Hall every summer.

In addition, Don has served for 10 years on the Angus Association's Board of Directors, providing "uncountable services" to the association.

Chapman said the award was "long overdue," given the family's history of service and ongoing interest in Angus activities. "Their contribution is immeasurable," he said.

Don Nichols also manages the purebred beef cattle operations at Penn State University.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Before spring arrives, my husband and I decided to take a day trip to the New Jersey State Aquarium. As we signed up rather late for the bus trip, we were assigned a back seat. On the way we stopped for lunch at a steak house.

We were on our own for a few hours to explore the second largest open ocean tank in the entire United States. More than 80 percent of the fish in the salt water tank were caught in and around the waters of New Jersey. Even the rays, sharks, and skates are native to New Jersey waters.

There was a tank of tiny fish that have no eyes as they live in dark caves and survive with their other senses. What I like to watch are the small brightly colored fish from tropical waters. They look just like the ones that I saw when I went snorkeling in the Caribbean. There were giant lobsters and sea turtles too. Even a trout stream greeted us as we entered the aquarium. Another large tank held harbor and gray seals that are native to nearby waters.

The next day was a change of pace as I helped to sew at the Lancaster General Hospital. Their large sewing room is in a corner of the basement and holds many sewing machines and is a place to store lots of material. Our church did not have a good turnout as some machines were not used. However, those of us who did come kept very busy sewing and talking. Later in the month I won't have time for these kind of activities as it will be time to start the gardens.

March 12 is the deadline for registration.

The symposium is open to anyone interested in horticulture, landscape design, or home gardening. The $65 fee covers registration and a weekend pass to Longwood Gardens. An optional lunch is available for $8. Proceedings of the speakers' talks will be available for $5. Preregistration is necessary.

The program will feature talks on artful garden design by noted local landscape architect Bill Frederick and the magic of living plant sculpture by Walt Disney World Resort horticulture manager Katy Moss Warner. David Streatfield, specialist in landscape architecture, urban design and planning and chair of the department of landscape architecture at the University of Washington, will speak about the historic link between art and gardens. Nationally known garden writer Tom Woodham will discuss his international exploration of decorative objects in the garden.

Special tours by Longwood staff will feature chrysanthemum training, bonsai, topiary and the 10,010-pipe organ at Longwood Gardens. Garden art exhibits by local artists will include tapestry, botanical illustration, garden sculpture and furniture.

Farm Safety Course For Teens

NEWARK, DE — Agriculture is a dangerous occupation, especially for the inexperienced. University of Delaware Cooperative Extension will offer a safety training course this month for teenagers who plan to work on farms during the summer.

Federal law prohibits youths under 16 from working in certain hazardous agricultural operations unless they have an exemption certificate from a safety training course. Some of the hazardous jobs closed to youths without training are operating a tractor with more than 20-belt horsepower; working inside airtight produce- and grain-storage areas or silos; operating or assisting with trenchers, forklifts, chain saws and other types of machines; and transporting passengers in vehicles on farm property.

Ron Jester, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension safety specialist, says 14- and 15-year-old farm workers can receive exemptions by completing this course.

"Although youths who work on their parents' farms don't need certificates, the course is recommended for all farm youth," he says. "Farming is a hazardous occupation even for experienced adults. Don't gamble by allowing youngsters to operate a tractor with a minimum of instruction and little or no experience. Safety training and more supervision could do much to reduce the high accident rate in this age group."

The training program consists of a correspondence course and three formal classes. The final class will include written tests and a tractor-driving test. Classes will be held at night and the sites will be determined after applications are in.

To register call the county Extension office in Dover, (302) 697-4000; Georgetown, 856-7303; or Newark, 831-2506.

Pilgrimage To Chile

SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Maryland Correspondent

NEW WINDSOR, Md. — "Dime todo de Chile," I asked Elizabeth Kurrie as she bounded down the steps of her New Windsor, Maryland home. "Tell me all about Chile." And there was a lot to be told by this bright 12-year-old who just returned home from a four-month stay in Chile.

Following in the footsteps of her older brother, Christopher, Elizabeth journeyed solo to the country of her heritage, and where her mother's family still lives — Chile. After finishing fifth grade in New Windsor Middle School, her parents, Leonor Pisano and Joe Schreyer, sent her to meet her aunt and continue the trip to Santiago, Chile, on August 23, 1992.

"It ends up being a 24-hour ordeal," commented Leonor "Lee" Pisano. "Chile is about seven thousand miles from Baltimore."

With layovers and connections to be made along the way, the flight, which might take seven hours, ends up being a much longer trip. And, in this case, matters were complicated because Elizabeth found herself in Miami without her passport. After a frenzied scurry to get her papers in order, she continued on.

Elizabeth and her family have made the trip to be with the Pisano clan in years past, but this was the first time for Elizabeth to go on her own. The purpose of the stay was for her "to learn Spanish and about the culture," explained Ms. Pisano.

In talking about her adventure, Elizabeth easily slipped into Spanish or English when consulting with her native Spanish-speaking mom.

"Habla pertectamente; she speaks perfectly," her mother concurred. In just four months, Elizabeth is fluent in Spanish.

"I liked school a lot," said Elizabeth. "We fooled around a lot, but not in class," she was quick to add.

Arriving in August, or springtime below the equator, Elizabeth picked up schooling in the middle of sixth grade at the Colegio Aleman de Quilpue or the German School of Quilpue.

Elizabeth Kurrie

"A typical day started at 8," she recalled. "I walked halfway and then rode with my cousin, Robert, the rest of the way to school. Classes were 45 minutes long. We had two classes, then a 15-minute break," and so on. School was out at 1:10. One of the most noticeable differences between her school in Chile and back in the U.S., was that the children stayed in the classroom and the teachers moved from class to class, except for German class. "Every Thursday sixth graders stayed until 4:45 for gym and biology, and on Tuesdays until 2:00.

All of Elizabeth's classes — social studies, physicl education, religion, biology, art, music, and home economics, were held in Spanish. "The first day it was a shock," recalled Elizabeth. But then, the kids said "I'll help you with anything. The kids accepted me right away."

She estimated that it took about two months, with the help of a tutor, to overcome the language barrier. Along with her classmates, Elizabeth also studied English (they start in first grade), and German.

"Everyone goes home for lunch," said Elizabeth. "And it's not just a sandwich. There is a first course and salad, a second course and dessert. Breakfast is kind of fancy, too." The family took tea at 6 or 7 with yogurt, pastries, cake, and milk for the kids and toast and tea for the adults. This late afternoon snack served to tide them over until the fourth meal of the day, when dinner was served at 9:30 or 10:00. She tried some of the local fare of this long coastal country famous for its seafood such as pulpo (octopus). "I only liked it in soup. I didn't like seaweed." One of her favortie dishes is empanadas, a specialty of her mother's that she enjoys at home.

Another of Elizabeth's favorite local dishes was "hot dog completo" or a hot dog with everything. "It had avocado, sauerkraut, mayonnaise, tomatoes and hot sauce. I've never eaten one without getting myself dirty," she laughed.

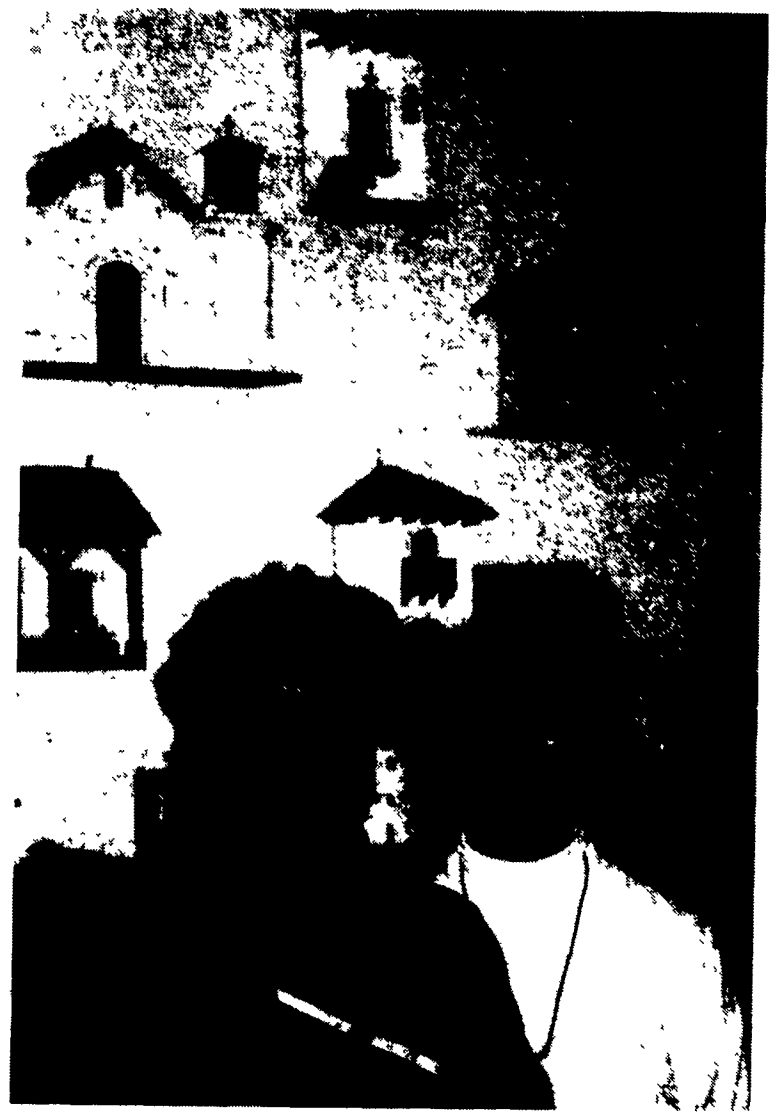
Elizabeth reported that she did well in her Chilean school and soon mastered the language, customs, and quickly got a handle on the money. "There are about 340 pesos in a dollar. Things are cheap. You could get a candy bar for less than a quarter."

As the months wore on, Elizabeth recalled "some great days in December. It was the beginning of summer. She made friends with kids in the neighborhood and at school. People there had parties at their houses instead of at school. The boys dance with the girls. They listen to both American and Chilean music. They asked me what it means all the time."

Elizabeth recalled one humorous incident when she heard one of her Spanish-speaking friends singing the words to a popular American tune — "Hello you fool, I love you."

"I asked her if she knew what she was saying and she said, 'I have no idea what it means — I just like it.'"

When Elizabeth wasn't swimming in the backyard pool at the host home of her aunt and uncle,



Elizabeth Kurrie, right, with her mother Leonor Pisano talk about life in Chile.

Dr. and Mrs. Herman Knop, or skiing in the Andes mountains at the chalet of her grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Raul Pisano, she might have been shopping or taking riding lessons. "This is my horse," pointed out Elizabeth in a photo from Chile. "My uncle gave it to me. Her name is Gringa." Elizabeth had riding lessons twice a week. "I learned to gallop, jump, trot, walk, and to put the saddle and gear on."

All in all, Elizabeth accomplished what she set out to do. At a young age, she is fluent in Spanish and has a much better understanding of the heritage that her parents try to keep alive for her. "Now, in the 90s, you can't get anywhere without knowing a second language," she said.

On Christmas Eve, Elizabeth left the summer sun of Chile and flew back to the wintery cold of New Windsor, Maryland where her family greeted her after four months. "You leave and expect it to be the same when you get back, but you've grown, and so have others," she said. "My best friend had two years' worth of questions for me."

"It was hard not having her here — of course we missed her," said Ms. Pisano. "We were delighted to give her the opportunity to do this. There are no regrets."

"It was a situation that was great," added Mr. Schreyer. "Hopefully in two or three years, she can do this again. It was such a neat experience."

Apprenticeship

PENNINGTON, NJ — The Natural Organic Farmers Association of New Jersey (NOFA-NJ), has developed an Organic Farm Apprenticeship Program, according to the Association's Executive Director, Jennifer Morgan.

The Program publishes a list of organic farms in the New Jersey area that offer an educational experience, along with a small stipend and/or room and board, in exchange for labor. Nineteen farms are listed in the Apprenticeship Program brochure offering training in many different areas including soil fertility, crop planning, field work, pest control, equipment maintenance, animal care, and marketing strategies. Apprentices will also be offered three off-farm educational seminars, taught by local experts and Rutgers University faculty, about the basics of organic growing methods.

"An apprentice will learn about the complexities of organic farming by combining both a school room and an on-the-job approach to farm education," said Carolyn Lasar, the Apprenticeship Program Director.

NOFA-NJ and six other NOFA chapters located in the Northeast are dedicated to serving the needs of organic growers through certification, education, marketing programs, and legislation. NOFA-NJ's programs are supported by memberships and grants from the United States Department of Agriculture, Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation, and The Fund for New Jersey. For information, contact NOFA-NJ, 31 Titus Mill Road, Pennington, NJ 08534. 609-737-6848.

Scholarship Dedicated To Farm Women's Leader

TAMAROA, Ill. — The Daughters of American Agriculture (DAA) will honor a nationally recognized leader by naming one of their scholarships after Sister Thomas More Bertels. The Franciscan nun is a strong advocate for farmers and ranchers and teaches at Silver Lake College in Manitowoc, Wis.

The $500 scholarship will be given to a woman who is 24 years old or older who wishes to continue her education and pursue a career in agriculture or related fields. Another scholarship is available to young women, ages 18-23, who are just starting their college education.

"With her devotion to agricultural causes and involvement as a leader in many agricultural organizations, Sister Thomas More is a good example of what educated and involved women can accomplish," said DAA President Jean Ibendahl.

The Sister is the author of "In Pursuit of Agri-Power," a 333-page book which discusses her ideas on farm policy. She chides farmers for non-use of power, which she says is lacking in the industry, but which is necessary for success.

Sister More, who is recuperating from back surgery, was extremely happy when informed about the scholarship. "You have made this a memorable day," she told Ibendahl.

The DAA was organized in 1992 to provide scholarships to women pursuing careers related to agriculture. Scholarships are offered in two categories, ages 18 to 23 and age 24 and over. The later category will be named after Sister Thomas More.

Funds are being solicited from other women involved in agriculture, from organizations and agribusinesses. Donors who designate their gifts for the Sister Thomas More Scholarship will have their names presented to her after the recipient has been chosen this spring.

Applications are available from Jean Ibendahl, Route 1 Box 12, Tamaroa, IL 62888. They must be returned by April 30, 1993. Contributions may be sent to the same address.

How To Grow Plants Under Light

YORK (York Co.) — Seed starting for the vegetable or flower garden often requires supplemental lighting. Most homes are simply too dark for good growth. Additional light that supplements natural sunlight is often needed.

For bedding plants grown solely under artificial light, fluorescent lights are required. To supplement a small amount of natural light, incandescent lamps are adequate but often produce too much heat. They produce light in the red range and, if used as the only light, will result in elongated growth and possible distortion of plants after several months.

Excellent plant growth is possible with fluorescent lamps, with one cool white and warm white lamp together. "Grow" lamps are more expensive. However, they may enhance the beauty of some plants such as the African violet.

The minimum size fixture to begin with is one that contains 2 tubes of 20 watts or 2 tubes of 40 watts. Lamps should be suspended 15 to 20 inches above the surface on which the plants will be grown. Plants may be as close as 6 to 9 inches prior to seedlings emergence.

For most bedding plants, light should be left on for 16 to 18 hours a day. An automatic timer is helpful but not necessary. If plants do not appear to be getting adequate light, move them closer to the tubes, add more tubes or increase the lighting time. Continuous light is satisfactory for some plants that may be far from the light source. Plant spacing also must be considered. Crowding results in weak stems and lack of sufficient air movement that can favor diseases.

Dolls So Lifelike That You Want To Talk With Them

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

JENNERSTOWN (Somerset Co.) — When you walk into Patti's Doll Shoppe on Route 30, near the traffic light, you don't know who to talk to first — Toby, Poppy, Cinnamon Cookie, Sugar Cookie, Pumpkin, or one of the other adorable dolls looking at you. All you know is, you could hold a conversation with any of them.

They were all made by Patti Youngren, proprietor of Patti's Doll Shoppe, who began making porcelain dolls about two years ago. She opened the shop and studio at the end of last July. Besides making dolls herself, Patti teaches the art to pupils by holding classes at the same location.

Patti, who hails from the south, took some of her own lessons in Florida, then attended seminars at various other locations including New York. "The more people you take lessons from," she said, "the more you learn." That's because everybody does something different, she said. "It almost turned me off because the lessons were so expensive," she said. Her first lessons began at a local ceramic shop.

So one of her objectives is to provide classes that are reasonably priced, because making porcelain dolls is not only an art, it's a delightful accomplishment for the soul.

"You want your dolls to look like they're alive," said Patti, "like they could sit up and talk to you. That's very important to me," she said. Anyone who sees these dolls would testify that each face is certainly animated.

In all shapes, sizes, expressions and costumes, some of them are elegantly gowned and very sophisticated. Others, are ready for a pajama party, still others have such an impish expression, you want to demand an account of the mischief they've done.

Sitting with friends in the window display is Patti's first doll, Pumpkin; the cutest little rascal ever. She's perched in a small wooden wagon made by Patti's dad. You can tell that Pumpkin is ready to coast down a hill in her wagon with her side pony tails flying.

Behind Patti Youngren on shelves is porcelain greenware for porcelain dollmaking.

Patti Youngren, standing, owner of Patti's Doll Shoppe, observes as her dollmaking pupil Betty Rhoades trims a thatch of hair for a boy doll.

When you make a porcelain doll, you first pour a mold then let it dry for 24 hours before firing it to the appropriate level of heat. Then it is removed and the eye and nose holes are cut out of the head. Patti says this is probably the most important step. "Because of health reasons, I use the soft-fire method," she said, explaining that porcelain is glass that hardens and can be a real health hazard from dust if inhaled.

She says the Seeley Company, with whom she closely works, requires that everything be put in water for cleaning. The process, after the firings, continues with sanding and washing, mixing of paints and painting, to assembling the doll.

The dolls have lifelike eyes of glass and eyelashes. Their carefully styled hair is also real. Each is garbed in clothes that will compliment her (or his) personality. The seamstresses who sew the dolls' clothes must be meticulous in their work. Patti creates only top quality dolls.

The molds for these dolls have been created by sculptors. Each mold has a name like those mentioned earlier. Pattie says that the doll, Cookie, if given red hair, is then Cinnamon Cookie. If she's a blond, then her name is Sugar Cookie.

One doll is called Angel Cheeks, not for her cute face, but rather for her cute bottom that you see when she's on her tummy.

"I love to make somebody happy," says Patti, who has learned to appreciate the life God has given her.

"This business, I've dedicated it to the Lord," she declares. "It's a clean, clean business and I love it."

Because of a muscle disease, Patti says she was told by medical authorities that she would be in a wheelchair by 1983. That hasn't happened and she is giving all the credit to God. She discovered, after moving north with her husband, Louis, that the difference in the air was giving her increased energy over the general tiredness she'd felt in the southern climates.

So by giving all respect to her body, Patti can work steadily. She doesn't push to the point of exhaustion, yet she has goals. Getting her dollmaking doctorate is one of them. Learning doll sculpting is another.

The ground level of the large building which includes their home, is so large that they are using only 700 of the available 2,500 square feet, for Patti's Doll Shoppe. However, Patti hopes to eventually host seminars in conjunction with the Seeley Company as expansion slowly continues.

An antique motif in the shop itself, finds Patti's desk coming from an old school house, and 1929 glass-fronted display cabinets rescued from an old drugstore in the town. Other smaller antiques were garnered from forays into antique shops and from sales, like the wooden baby cradle.

Doll clothes are hung on the wooden arms of racks where great-grandmother would once have hung her dish towels.

When asked about some of the doll furniture, — the tricycles and wagons — Patti says with pride that these were made by her dad. And the large BeBe Bunnies sitting around the place were made by her mother.

Louis is the town mayor, but he just may be more excited about his wife's dollmaking success than she is. In fact, he is so supportive and interested that he will help with Patti's dollmaking classes, if needed, and has made a boy doll which is displayed in the shop.

Louis states adamantly that Patti is a talented artist. He says he has experience as a commercial artist and knows one when he sees one. It was he who urged Patti to turn her dollmaking hobby into a business in the first place.

Patti says that you put expression in the doll's face by the way you paint it, and her creations certainly have expression, so no doubt, her most avid fan is correct.

But take caution, doll collectors. Patti warns, "Some people put dolls in plastic bags and that's the worst thing they can do." Another recommendation from Patti is, "Keep the original box and wrapping paper and everything to make it (your doll) more valuable."

Patti holds classes on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of each week, in the morning, afternoon and evening. Saturday class starts at 10:00 a.m. Thursday, the shop is open to the public and Friday it is closed. Patti can be reached by calling (814) 629-9093, or by writing to P.O. Box 122, Jennerstown, PA 15547.

Patti says that some of her

4-H HAPPENINGS

Clover Bunch 4-H Prep Club

The Clover Bunch 4-H Prep Club met at the Rutgers Extension Center on February 5.

The club elected the following officers: president - Louis Hribik of Neshanic; vice president - Melanie Martin of Ringoes; treasurer - Matt Snyder of Flemington; and reporter - Julianne Martin of Ringoes.

The program was given by Mrs. Snyder. She distributed the evening's activity instruction sheet entitled Earth X-Press' to each member.

The preppers tore pieces of old newspapers to shreds to make peat pots. This form of recycling uses scraps of news printed paper, hot water, electric hand mixer, strainer or colander, and a paper drinking cup to form the peat pots.

When all this was finished and the peat pots were formed, the members planted seeds in their newly formed planter cups.

The business discussed included Prep Camp on April 2-4 at L.G. Cook Camp, Stokes Forest.

Milking starts two months early at Cal Poly SLO's new showplace dairy.

By Dennis Halladay

After five years of planning and $4 3 million in building costs, even balky cows and the usual parlor start-up 'surprises' couldn't put a damper on the festive mood June 4 when the first cows were milked at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo's new dairy.

It did take some pushing and dragging to load several reluctant Jerseys, and it didn't help that the university and student herds were moving from a 1940s-era flat-barn to a computerized, state of the art double-8 herringbone But the Holsteins mostly cooperated and there was LOTS of extra help on hand if needed, so all in all things actually went pretty well

Cow comfort is an obvious priority at the new dairy The parlor is spacious and airy, and features rapid-exits and extra-wide return lanes Cow traffic alleys are wide and deeply grooved, with high curbs that serve as excellent flush lanes. The two freestall barns feature generous standing area and they open into outside exercise lots. There are stalls for 500 head, more than twice the current number of milking cows, and computer feeders are provided at the rate of one station per 23 head

Situated between the parlor and the freestall barns is a fully covered maternity and 'individual attention' barn which contains calving pens and mini-corrals that can be used, for instance, to separate cows into research treatment groups. This area also has its own simple two stall milking area, complete with a vacuum line and electrical service

They will also be holding a trail ride. For more information on future fund raisers, club activities, or to join this new club, please call (717) 284-2110.

4-H Goat Club

The Cumberland County 4-H Goat Club held its first meeting on February 3 at the home of Bill Leib with 10 members and seven guests present.

Robert Leib talked on selection of meat goats.

Election of officers was held with the following results: president-Bill Leib; vice-president-Kelli Zeigler; secretary-Heather Glennon; treasurer-Matt Souder; news reporter-Tim Zeigler; county council representatives-Bill Leib and Zachary Travis; and social chairman responsibilities will be shared by Shane Conaway, Katie Farrell, and Carrassi Zimmer.

The next meeting will be held on March 3 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Kelli and Tim Zeigler.

For more information about the goat club, contact the extension office or one of the leaders, Red Allen at (717) 776-5097, Suzie Leib at (717) 697-5374, or Lois Zeigler at (717) 776-7583.

State Road 4-H Club must b

The State Road 4-H held its first meeting of the year on February 8 at Sandy Knipe's residence.

An election of officers was held and the result is as follows: President Susan Waltz, Vice President Adam Falls, Secretary Ariel Hunter, Treasurer Julia Groff, and News Reporter Seth Derr.

The club members discussed their projects of swine, dairy, sheep, and rabbits. They also talked about name signs, roundup projects, and meeting activities.

A gravity flush system cleans the parlor, freestall barns and all alleys. Water flows to a sophisticated waste treatment area at the rear of the dairy, first into a large sand trap, then into a settling tank, and finally into a holding pond where it is reused for flushing and crop irrigation Solids from the settling tank are screened through a separator, dried and eventually used for bedding.

The automated, computerized and lavishly tiled double-8 herringbone parlor is the centerpiece of the Dairy Science Instructional Center, a two-story complex (complete with an elevator) of meeting and classrooms, offices, computer and microbiology labs, observation deck and even an apartment for two on-site student workers Located next to the Dairy Center is the new Nutrition and Physiology Laboratory, where students will get hands-on experience with everything from A I. and forage analysis to embryo splitting and transfer

Dr Ed Jaster, Cal Poly Dairy Science Department head, says that in addition to the 1,000 or so students per year that are expected to be exposed to the dairy center on some academic level — most of them non-dairy majors — there are other plans for it as well.

He hopes to also make it available to local, state and national dairy groups for meetings, conferences and perhaps even seminars for working dairy professionals wishing to brush up on the latest in commercial production methods

Construction of the dairy, however, is only the first step toward what may become the most modern, fully integrated university dairy production, processing and research center in the U S. The next step was insured in June, when California voters approved a higher education funding bill that included $7.5 million for construction of a dairy processing and manufacturing center at Cal Poly This facility will also be home to one of six Dairy Product Technology and Research Centers, a nationwide program funded by the National Dairy Board for research and development of new dairy products. Construction is expected to begin as soon as late next year.

Lawn Seeding

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — If you missed seeding bare and thin spots in the lawn last Fall, you will have a second chance as snow retreats. Late February and early March, when the soil freezes and thaws frequently, is the time for "frost seeding."

A critical factor in any successful lawn seeding is soil-seed contact. Lawn seed sown soon will, in effect, be planted for you by the action of alternate freezing and thawing of the soil surface. Then, when the soil temperature warms up sufficiently, the seeds will germinate, getting an early start and increasing the probability that the seedlings will survive the weeds and heat to come. Frost seeding is worth trying for limited repair of a lawn. It is not recommended for general seeding.

For frost seeding to succeed, organic debris that is on the soil surface must be removed. Seed is then sown, at a heavy rate (about 0.5lb per 100 sq. ft.) uniformly over the area. If you do this early in the day when the soil is still "honey combed" from the night's freeze, the seed will begin to be worked into the soil as it thaws later in the day.

Overall lawn seeding, whether for renovation of an old lawn or for a new lawn, is best done in late summer/early fall. Second choice is early spring, as soon as the ground can be worked. Soil preparation prior to seeding is critical to success.

Rutgers Cooperative Extension has several Fact Sheets available on lawn topics including: seeding, selecting seed, renovation, care, weed control. To receive this free information, send a SASE with your request to Rutgers Cooperative Extension of Hunterdon County, 4 Gauntt Place, Flemington, NJ 08822, Attention: Master Gardeners.

What's In Mr. D's Trunk?

SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Maryland Correspondent

WESTMINSTER, Md. — What's in Mr. D's trunk? That's the question in the young minds of Patrick Dotterweich's seventh grade students at Westminster West Middle School, in Carroll County, Maryland.

"I found an old trunk at an auction," said Mr. Dotterweich, who has been teaching social studies at the middle school for nine years. "It was painted bright pink, and I bought it for $5."

Inspired by a hands-on history exhibit at the Smithsonian, Mr. Dotterweich refinished the old piece with a purpose in mind. "History is difficult for these kids to understand. If you can show them something, that makes it more real," he explained.

The trunk now occupies a prominent spot in room 7, where the walls and shelves serve as a showcase for glimpses into history. "My stuff is a collection of over a lot of years," said Mr. Dotterweich. The bulletin board announces "Into the Future with America Past."

Old photographs, flags, money, and bottles share the shelves with baseball memorabilia, Mickey Mouse ears, and more. But, most intriguing, is the trunk.

"It looks like a pirate chest," said 12-year-old Megan Clishan.

"I thought it was a treasure chest with Fool's gold," recalled seventh grader Clint Walker.

"He keeps an old lock on it, too," observed classmate, Jason Fitzgerald, also 12.

"That adds to the mystique," said Mr. Dotterweich, with a chuckle.

The contents of the trunk have not been completely revealed to the students. "It's full of a whole bunch of neat stuff and old artifacts," said Megan. "I've got to find out what's in there," added Jason.

One piece at a time, Mr. D., as the kids affectionately call him, pulls out of the trunk, a relic of the past. It may be an authentic newspaper from 1809, or a December 8, 1941 edition of the Baltimore News Post whose headline declares "War Declared on Japanese." "You can talk about them 'til you're blue in the face, but how interesting is that?" he asked.

"We talk about the value of looking at different sources of history for information. Some may give an accurate account or a distorted view," he explained.

"History is a tool," he continued. "I like to emphasize that you can study all these famous people, but it really doesn't make sense until you relate it to yourself."

The cedar-lined trunk, which measures about 2½ by 3½ feet, guards such treasures as a centennial history of the U.S., signed baseballs, old Beatles records and a piece of the Berlin Wall. As the school year progresses, Mr. Dotterweich said he "pulls stuff out," and adds other things. He may change the artifacts within the old trunk to support lessons on Native Americans, the colonial period, the Westward Movement, "and my favorite, the Civil War," he said.

"A good way to work on thinking skills is to put in things they don't know," suggested Mr. Dotterweich. One such relic is an ancient piece of Aztec hoe money. The thin piece of copper currency was used by the Aztec Indians, according to the history buff. "Some were shorter and some were longer and they can be stacked. Four slaves could be bought with this before Christopher Columbus' time. After Columbus, it would purchase one bushel of corn," he explained.

Twelve-year-old Bonnie Flipczak gave an example of her teacher's unique approach to history in the classroom. "He pulls out something outrageous from that time, but it really makes sense and is a part of our lives now."

"He was trying to make us think like an archaeologist, and realize how important and difficult that job is," added Jason.

It's the kind of lesson that Mr. Dotterweich says "helps the students put it (history) in perspective — what it is that we value in our culture."

Seventh grade social studies with Mr. Dotterweich is a popular subject with the students. "I can't wait to come here," said Clint. "It's sad when we leave."

"He teaches us and entertains at the same time," the group concurred.

And they're still dying to know what is in Mr. D's trunk!

Kerra And 'Patches' Gather $6,000 For Shelter

JENNIFER KOPF

Special to Lancaster Farming

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — A lamb named Patches may seem, at first glance, to be an unlikely source of donations for Lancaster's Clare House.

He's friendly enough, with a black face in sharp contrast with his wooly whiteness, and an insistent bleat when he feels he's not getting enough attention. But can a lamb, even an endearing lamb, be the catalyst for funds direly needed by a women and children's shelter?

The answer, of course, lies in that something special that catches the imagination. The unlikely duo of Patches and his owner, Manheim's Kerra Allen, has raised nearly $6,000 thus far for the nonprofit shelter.

Plans of good intent, after all, don't have to be part of a grand scheme — sometimes, all that's needed is the good intent and the conviction to take some action.

❒ For Kerra, 11, the raising and showing of a 4-H lamb is nothing new. In the show ring since she was 4, she has been showing at the Manheim Fair for the past four years through the 4-H program. Any money earned from the sale of her lambs goes toward the feed and equipment needed to support her projects.

So the purchase last year of a market lamb from Curt Diffenderfer wasn't anything out of the ordinary. Patches was raised and prepared like all the rest of Kerra's lambs have been, readied for his fall marathon of farm shows.

At the same time, Kerra was keeping up her full schedule of activities, from her studies at Mastersonville Elementary to attending services at Ruhl's United Methodist Church of Manheim. And it was here that Kerra first heard about the needs of Clare House.

"We were gathering pennies for Clare House," Kerra explained, and the sermon one Sunday was about Clare House. For the first time, I really understood" what the shelter was for, and its importance to those who depend on it. "It runs on private support (from donations)," she said, "and it was in a financial crisis. They said it might have to close"

She had been planning to donate the profit from a lamb's sale to the church building fund but, after talking to the pastor, decided to give the funds instead to Clare House.

A notice went in the church bulletin, and a sign was created to hang above Patches' pen at the Manheim Fair. "I'd be sitting on the fence, and I'd see people looking at the sign," Kerra said. The word about the benefit sale began to get around.

Her goal, Kerra said, was "at least $1.25 to $1.50 a pound," pretty much in line with Patches' size, "but when I began leading him around the ring, I just thought, 'Let's hope for the best.'"

She needn't have worried. The very first bid came in at more than Kerra had ever hoped for. "Every time I came past Mom I'd look at her and she'd look at me... I knew that $7.50 (per pound) was the highest ever. When they got past $7.50, I was ready to shoot through the ceiling."

As the bidding progressed, said her mom, Kendy, "it just got quieter and quieter. People couldn't believe what was going on."

When the final call came, Patches had been purchased by Tom Drumm of TW's Leather Sales Inc., 50-A S. Broad St., Lititz, for $11 a pound — about a $1,000 donation for Clare House. His bidding outlasted that of Darvin Boyd from Hamilton Bank, who was also aware of Kerra's promise to Clare House.

"I went to thank Tom," Kerra said last week, smiling, "and he just said, 'By the way, the lamb's yours.' I went back and hugged him again!"

For his part, Drumm said, he was a novice in the world of market lamb bidding. A member of the board at Clare House, Drumm had been made aware of Kerra's effort.

"I began to talk with my partner and some other people here" at the leather business, Drumm said earlier this week, "and they said 'Yeah, we'll split (the cost) up with you. Then I began asking around, to see what prices it might bring."

Needless to say, the original estimate was more than a little lower than the final asking price.

"Oh, nobody groused!" Drumm said. "Most of the people I do business with are very generous people as far as donating" to charitable causes.

❒ While the story could have ended here, the image of Patches and Kerra seemed to spark something more, and the donations began to come in from some unexpected sources.

Boyd and Hamilton Bank, known for their support of 4-H projects, honored the firm's final bid and donated that amount to Clare House. A lady came up to Kerra at the fair, "told me she couldn't afford to bid on the lamb, and then handed me $20," Kerra said.

Kerra Allen and Patches, so far, have raised $6,000 for the nonprofit shelter.

Curt Diffenderfer, Patches' original owner, donated the lamb's purchase price to Clare House. Kerra's 4-H club gave funds to the drive.

And customer's of Drumm's heard about the company's purchase and were inspired as well. His bank in town heard about his involvement and made a donation; a customer from New York City, an Iranian businessman, heard about the lamb's sale and sent a check to Drumm.

And there have been the checks, large and small, which have come Kerra's way since the fair season. All of the money has been passed on to Clare House.

"I want to thank all my buyers, and everyone who donated," Kerra said, "especially Tom Drumm and Darvin Boyd."

Grassland FFA Officers Plan For Second Semester

The weekend of January 16 was an important one for the officer team of the Grassland FFA Chapter. Planning for the upcoming semester during a weekend excursion to the mountains was the main goal of the 21 members.

Under the instruction of advisors Cliff Day and Bob Lauffer, the officers discussed the activities and projects to be accomplished by the 12 chapter committees.

Some of the events that were discussed included the upcoming Donkey Basketball Game to be held on March 26.

The annual FFA parent and member banquet was also among the topics discussed during the retreat. On March 12, all current FFA members, their parents, and recent alumni are invited to Yoder's restaurant for a banquet and presentation of awards.

The members talked about the responsibilities of each of the 12 committees and planned the activities of each for the rest of the year.

Throughout the weekend, there was also time for some recreation and a chance for the officers to get to know each other to work better together.

Who Makes The Best?

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Know of a neighborhood restaurant that serves the juiciest steaks around? How about a local gathering place that fixes up meatloaf or pot roast just like mom used to make? Then the PA Beef Council wants to hear from you!

The PA Beef Council announces their annual "Beef Backer" Award Program to honor those restaurants who actively support and promote beef on their menus. Sponsored by the PA Beef Council in conjunction with the Beef Industry Council, the Beef Backer program is designed to show appreciation to those operators in PA who are doing exciting and innovative things with beef.

"We're looking for recommendations as to which restaurants deserve to run for this top honor," says Kelley Shearer, retail and foodservice coordinator of the Pennsylvania Beef Council. "No restaurant is too big or too small. All we ask is that they are a loyal supporter of beef—both on and off the menu."

Restaurants are judged on how they incorporate beef into current menu trends, innovative preparation methods and beef dominance on the menu. If you have a special restaurant in mind, contact Kelley Shearer with your recommendation at The Pennsylvania Beef Council, 4714 Orchard Street, Harrisburg, PA 17109 or call (717) 545-6000.

Kerra And 'Patches'

❐ The shelter "is over the hump" now, said board member Drumm, with five or six months' worth of funding now in the bank. The need for the service will not abate, though, and the board is in the process of trying to set up a steady income for Clare House. In addition, several fund raisers are planned for just before Easter.

The results of Kerra's inspiration, Drumm said, have been far reaching. "They say you can't 'out-give' God, and that's the truth."

❐ Kerra's enjoying the company of Patches, now a good bit larger than during farm show season. He lives next door, and Kerra visits several times a day to feed and care for him. He, in turn, "follows her around," Kendy said.

He's also become a celebrity of sorts — he worked over Christmas, in a local church Nativity scene.

No doubt, he played that role with the same flair that he gave to his show ring performance last year at the Manheim Fair.

Donations to Clare House are the sole source of income for the shelter. Anyone wishing to help the effort can send a donation to Clare House, P.O. Box 104, East Petersburg, 17520.

Sheep — Rumor vs. Fact on New Lamb Grading System

By Clair C. Engle

Questions continue on the quality and yield grading system implemented this past July. Following are some excerpts from Sheep Magazine (October 1992).

RUMOR: There is no demand for quality and yield graded product.

FACT: Retailers have wholeheartedly embraced this program. In fact, they are demanding lamb that is quality and yield graded product because it addresses their key issues: consistency, quality, cutability, and value. They backed American Sheep Industry Association (ASI) in supporting quality and yield grading and Certified American Lamb, rejecting an alternative proposed by packers which significantly loosened criteria on leanness. In fact, in the first two weeks of the program's implementation, retailers rejected whole loads of lambs that had not been quality and yield graded. Retailers have kept the faith, supporting quality and yield grading, and showing their willingness to pay for the increased value of the product.

RUMOR: The new lamb grading program has caused disruption in the marketplace.

FACT: With any new change comes some disruption to the market. But look at some of the facts and see if the disruption is contrived. Feeders are not selling lambs based on yield grade. Packers are not using the program to buy lambs. They're still buying on averages and dressing percentage, as always. There have been no discounts on any particular grade of lamb. Packers are selling lamb based on yield grade and differentiating at yield grades 1 and 2 for certified and recently at yield grades 3 and down. So the argument that prices have declined due to the implementation of quality and yield grading holds no water. Any natural disruption from the implementation of this program will be limited because of its gradual movement into the marketplace. It cannot be attributed as the cause of continual large declines in carcass and live price.

RUMOR: Quality and yield grading are hurting the producer.

FACT: Quality and yield grading is the first real step by producers toward value-based marketing. It is a tool to help the producer market his product based on lean meat yield. With the addition of good market price information, it will help the producer determine the value of his product, analyze market condition and ultimately market lamb in a profitable way.

Computer Record-keeping Is Popular

By Keith A. Bryan

Since its inception in 1987, the National Sheep Improvement Program (NSIP) computerized record-keeping system for determining expected progeny differences within flock has become increasingly popular. The statistics in Table 1 were compiled in March 1990.

Table 1. Enrollment Statistics

Number of flocks enrolled		756
Commercial (23%)		174
Purebred (77%)		582
Suffolk	25%
Dorset	15%
Hampshire	14%
Polypay	9%
Columbia	7%
Rambouillet	7%
Targhee	3%
Others	19%
Total number of ewes		38,284
Average flock size		50

Table 2. Processing Fee for NSIP Computer Program

Number of Ewes Enrolled	Once Per Year	Accelerated
less than 100	$1.00	$1.50
100 to 200	$.90	$1.35
more than 200	$.80	$1.20

Flocks from 45 states, Mexico, and Canada have been enrolled. Very few flocks from the western and high plains regions were enrolled. Most of the enrolled flocks were small — up to 50 ewes — from the midwestern region (Wisconsin, Iowa, Ohio, and Indiana). The 60-day growth trait was the most important to purebred producers, followed by 90- and 120-day weights. Very few producers were using 180- and 365-day weights, and only 238 purebred flocks were reporting grease fleece weight.

Three programs are available to producers: (1) registered purebred flocks, (2) commercial flocks with known parentage, and (3) commercial flocks with unknown parentage. The current enrollment annual fee is $35, with an additional processing fee based on the number of ewes enrolled, as shown in Table 2.

The NSIP personal computer interface and PC Genetic Summary are optional programs that allow a producer to send and/or receive information from the NSIP Processing Center using an IBM-compatible personal computer.

For further information on NSIP programs contact Keith Bryan (814-863-0569) or Clair Engle (814-863-3669).

Environment Influences Puberty Attainment in Gilts

Keith A. Bryan

The effects of moving, mixing, and boar exposure near or at pubertal onset in gilts have been documented extensively; however, the role of the physical environment in pubertal attainment is less well understood. Two studies investigated the influence of elevated temperature (heat stress) and concentration of pit gases on puberty in gilts. Gilts were maintained in environmental temperatures of either 60° F or 92° F for 10 days. Stressed gilts had higher rectal temperatures and respiration rates compared with controls. A higher percentage of control gilts (90%) attained puberty by 230 days of age compared with heat-stressed gilts (20%). Therefore, chronic exposure of prepubertal gilts to elevated temperatures delayed pubertal onset.

In a study to determine the influence of pit gases on puberty of gilts, groups of gilts were reared in one of two environments. Aerial concentrations of ammonia were higher (21 vs. 5 ppm) in the experimental room compared with the control room. A higher percentage of gilts in the control room were pubertal by 203 days of age compared with gilts reared in the experimental room, approximately 40% vs 20%, respectively. Therefore, moderate concentrations (21 ppm) of ammonia delay puberty in gilts reared in confinement and may interfere with positive stimuli that result in decreased age at puberty.

Sheep — Research Briefs For Sheep

By Keith A. Bryan

1. Culling ewes based on performance of traits that are lowly repeatable, such as reproduction, can have detrimental effects on productivity of the entire sheep operation. Accelerated lambing can, but doesn't always, result in shorter productive lives of ewes compared with annual lambing.

2. Use of progesterone pessaries (controlled internal drug dispensers) in conjunction with the ram effect and the ram effect alone advanced the breeding season and increased annual lamb production by about one lamb per ewe.

3. Conducting tests for serving capacity in rams can accurately predict mating performance of rams exposed to a high number of estrual ewes. This information can be used to more clearly define ram-to-ewe ratios and should result in shortened lambing periods.

1993 Wool Classing Workshop Planned

Due to popular request from producers in PA and adjoining states, ASI is asking for our cooperation in conducting another wool classing workshop in May 1993. We are asking county extension livestock personnel to share this information with sheep and wool growers via newsletter and county leaders. Please share names and complete addresses of anyone interested with both Clair Engle (814-863-3669) and the program coordinator: Joe Vogel, RD#1, Box 188, Kempton, PA 19529.

Swine — Increased Copper For Sows Improves Productivity

By Kenneth B. Kephart

Producers know that growing pigs benefit from high dietary levels of copper. Recent research suggests sow productivity may also increase when elevated levels of copper are fed during gestation. Swine require 3-9 parts per million (ppm) of copper in the diet, depending on the size of the pig. It's been long recognized that feeding 100-250 ppm improves growth and feed efficiency in growing pigs. At these dietary levels, no long-term side effects have been observed, although copper levels in the liver increase two-fold to three-fold. Long-term feeding of 500 ppm dietary copper results in dramatic changes in liver copper (50-fold to 75-fold increase), as well as an impairment of normal liver function. Gary Cromwell and others at the University of Kentucky recently completed a series of experiments to determine whether excess dietary copper during gestation and lactation had any effects on performance or sow health. A total of 56 crossbred gilts were allotted to the study over a three-year period.

Long-term Effects of Feeding High-Copper Diets to Sows

Amount of Dietary Copper	9 ppm	250 ppm
Pigs/litter	10.1	10.8
Live pigs/litter	9.2	9.5
28-day piglet wt, lb.	15.0	15.8
Days from weaning to estrus	5.8	4.9
Liver, copper, ppm	442	1899
Kidney, copper, ppm	34	59

WHY BUSH HOG SQUEALERS MOW DOWN THE COMPETITION.

There are two basic reasons and quality is the first. Each Squealer model is equipped with Bush Hog's tough, patented gearbox. All models except the 42 inch wide cutter feature oval blade pans, and the 60 and 72 inch wide models have an "in-line" shear bolt with ball bearing protection that can be replaced in a snap An optional slip clutch is available

The second reason for the Squealer's popularity is price Select any of five models, 42 to 84-inches wide, and compare prices with the competition With a true price and quality comparison, it's easy to see why Squealers mow down the competition

ABS Summary Offers Breeders High Profit Returns

DEFOREST, Wis. — American Breeders Service (ABS) reports a unique offering of Holstein sires following the January 1993 Sire Summary.

"As you look across the ABS Holstein bull list, customers will notice a nice selection of bulls which offer a unique 'high dollar return' potential with additional benefits in udder improvement and feet and legs," said Dick Smith, manager of dairy product developmenmt at ABS. "We recognize the need to offer our customers modern bulls that increase the profitability of their herds, and ABS is fortunate to have a nice package of sires to meet this objective."

According to the Holstein Association's Top 20 List for protein pounds, ABS has two of the top five bulls. These bulls are 29 H6425 CUBBY (+86P) and 29 H5618 VALS PRIDE (+81P). ABS also leads the industry with 12 of the top 25 bulls on the Holstein Association's Top 100 List.

Starting ABS off on that list is one of the most elite bulls in Holstein history, 29 H5730 MELWOOD. Adding an additional 1,000 daughters, MELWOOD has secured his place in total performance genetics with a TPI of +1157. At a time when many popular bulls have negative foot and leg composites, MELWOOD is an exceptional alternative. No other bull in the breed's history has ever combined such remarkable genetic attributes of superb foot and leg conformation (+2.41 F&L Comp.), incredible production (+2269M, +64P, +110F), and a positive udder composite. MELWOOD is a logical and profitable choice for many of the modern Holstein bloodlines. He can be used to sire daughters that are tall, strong, and have an open dairy frame.

Perhaps the best test of any elite bull is his ability to sire superior sons as well as daughters. The MELWOOD influence is now available to dairy producers around the world through ABS' most exciting new release, 29 H6217 Singing-Brook BENCHMARK—ET, an Excellent MELWOOD son from Paclamar Marietta Bows. While BENCHMARK'S 72 percent reliability keeps him from appearing on the Holstein Association's TPI list, his first summary ranks him fifth in the breed with a TPI of +1188. BENCHMARK is clearly an exciting opportunity for producers seeking new genetics. With no Bell, Chief Mark, or Blackstar breeding behind him, BENCHMARK can be used on popular bloodlines for improved protein (+70P), lots of milk (+2506M), superior type (+1.93 PTAT), correct feet and legs (+1.52 F&L), and extremely profitable cattle (+306 MFP$).

BENCHMARK, MARVEL, and NITTANY represent the Mandy family now recognized as one of the premier cow families of the Holstein breed. 29 H6053 MARVEL is a maternal brother to BENCHMARK from Paclamar Marietta Bows, sired by the popular Canadian bull Starbuck. In the January summary, MARVEL improved in all major production categories and remained well over a point in both udder composite (+1.11 UDC) and type (+1.72 PTAT), increasing his TPI by 93 points (+1007). MARVEL joins his paternal brother, 29 H5958 ELL, as the only two Starbuck sons over +1000 TPI.

A third source of the Mandy family offered through the ABS lineup is 29 H6159 NITTANY. NITTANY is the Enhancer maternal brother to Paclamar Marietta Bows and the popular Singing Brook Mascot, all offspring of Jackbuilt Chairman Amanda. NITTANY's first summary of +1811M, +53P, and +71F speaks for itself and ranks him number 25 in the breed for TPI +1115. NITTANY is the best proven Enhancer son available and ABS' highest type sire (+2.57 PTAT). NITTANY may be one of the few Enhancer sons that sires high total performance and improved feet and legs (+.25 F&L Comp.).

A second cow family that continues to dominate the ABS lineup is the Rynd-Home Valiant Cutie family. Leading this family for ABS, 29 H6425 CUBBY has held in strong adding 18 new daughters in 11 herds. CUBBY is the breed's second highest protein bull (+86P) and maintained a TPI of +1107. CUBBY daughters are large, powerful cows with low pins, very correct feet, average udders, and they have extreme will to milk (+2912M). CUBBY has consistently ranked in the Holstein Association's top five rankings for PTA protein, PTA milk, and PTA protein dollar value.

29 H5619 ENDEAVOR, is CUBBY's maternal brother by Mark, and held at +68 pounds PTA Protein. With a TPI of +1097, ENDEAVOR truly is a type and protein specialist, offering dairy producers a Mark son that sires acceptable feet and legs.

Making a first time appearance, 29 H6183 HARDTAC offers an exciting new pedigree for protein improvement (+74 PTAP). HARDTAC is a Klark son from an Excellent-91 Chairman making at least two generations of Excellent mammaires. HARDTAC daughters are average in size, above average in mammary, and maintain high protein percentages. A second Klark son, 29 H6085 REVERE, TPI +1104, also sires tall, good-uddered cattle in a protein package (+71 PTAP).

"At a time when the breed needs the superb feet and legs of Rotate, ABS offers Rotate's best sons, without sacrificing udders," said Smith. In addition to MELWOOD, ABS offers elite Rotate

GVM Refines High Clearance Sprayer

BIGLERVILLE (Adams Co.) — After integrating recent technology and conducting extensive field tests, GVM, Incorporated, announces the introduction of its newly refined HyRise high clearance sprayer.

Applicators involved with the field testing reported increased efficiency both in the field and between farms, citing the Hy Rise's considerable maneuverability and road speeds (up to 45 mph).

Joe Lam, of Rockingham Farm Bureau, Rockingham, Va. said, "The thing I like most about the HyRise is its speed between farms and in the field. We drove the HyRise everywhere we sprayed. The down time of hauling a high clearance sprayer just wasn't there this year. In just one day, we sidedressed 250 acres of corn on six farms and covered 9,000 acres just post-emergence. Next year we plan on using it in all our pre-plant fields also."

The HyRise is designed especially for row crops, with clearances of up to 47 inches and a backrack that adjusts 20 to 81 inches off the ground. It is built on a F-350 Ford chassis, and is engineered with a heavy duty drive box, consisting of 100 double link roller chains. A 400 gallon tank capacity and the ability to tow a 1025 gallon nurse trailer add to the Unit's efficiency.

The HyRise may be purchased as a complete unit, or as a kit, making it possible to convert GVM's HydraSpray to a HyRise. The kit allows on truck to perform the tasks of two, providing economic advantages.

For more information on the HyRise, other fertilizer equipment, parts, and accessories, contact GVM Incorporated, 374 Heidlersburg Road, Biglerville, PA 17307, (7 7) 677-6197.

genetics through 29 H5982 JUGGLER (+2322M, +62P, +1.28 UDC, +.46 F&L, +1155 TPI), and 29 H5824 ELUSIVE (+2582M, 62P, +1.39 UDC, +.33 F&L, +1098 TPI). Another Rotate addition, 29 H6122 VISION offers dairy producers a source of tall, dairy cows without sacrificing production, from a unique Rotate x Ijon pedigree.

As protein specialists, 29 H5618 VALS PRIDE and 29 H5772 TEX maintained +81 and +79 PTAP respectively. VALS PRIDE is siring extremely profitable daughters with correct feet and strongly supported udders. TEX is a Ned Boy son that sires calving ease and high production to support his extreme protein. Another calving ease specialist, 29 H5654 BRASS increased his TPI and can be used as an udder and calving ease specialist.

For producers wanting to take advantage of Chief Mark breeding, ABS has one of Chief Mark's best sons for both overall type and udder improvement. 29 H5784 MALLOY rose to +1106 TPI. MALLOY sires solid improvements in all body traits except foot angle.

Several popular ABS bulls added hundreds of second crop A.I. daughters and their proofs increased. 29 H4548 FANCY PAUL again rose in TPI to +1064. This production improver (+2550 PTAM) is plus rated in all type composites. 29 H5296 SOUTHWIND added over 700 new daughters and increased in TPI to +1009. Increasing by one-half point in both udder composite and type, SOUTHWIND has secured himself as a global favorite that improves udders and type with profitable production.

ABS also has held its position as the industry-leading source of Red and White genetics. 29 H0715 MOMENTUM—RED added additional daughters this summary and increased in all production traits. With current production traits of +2201M and MOMENTUM—RED's TPI of +971 positions him as the highest TPI Red bull and the highest living PTAP Red sire. "MOMENTUM—RED is what the Red and White industry has been working for," said Smith, noting this Enhancer-free sire transmits improvement in udders, feet and legs, and teat length with super production.

Md. 4-H Dairy Judges Prepare For Trip

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Members of Maryland's 1992 national champion 4-H dairy cattle judging team — and their parents — have begun a round of fund-raising activities to help finance their trip to Europe in late June and early July.

The team will represent the United States in international youth livestock judging competition on June 25 at the Royal Highland Show in Edinburgh, Scotland. Also representing the U.S. during the Edinburgh competition will be the national champion 4-H livestock judging team from Illinois and the national champion FFA livestock and dairy cattle judging teams from adjoining counties in eastern New Mexico.

Members of the Maryland team are Mark Iager, 16, of Fulton (Howard County); Christopher "Chip" Savage, 17, of Burkittsville (Frederick County); Marie L. Speak, 17, of Taneytown (Carroll County); and Kristi Geary, 17, of Goshen (Montgomery County).

Dr. J. Lee Majeskie of Calverton (Prince George's County) is the team coach. Majeskie is an extension dairy cattle specialist with the Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources, University of Maryland System. Assisting him with the coaching duties this year is Brian D. Derr of Taneytown, a professional fitter of dairy show cattle and a member of the 1981 Maryland 4-H dairy cattle judging team. He helped to coach last year's Carroll County state champion senior 4-H dairy cattle judging team.

Majeskie and Derr's youthful charges are the 26th team from Maryland to win the national 4-H dairy cattle judging championship since the contest began in 1919. They are the 18th Maryland team since 1951 to participate in judging competition in Great Britain.

The Frederick County Holstein Association sponsored a fun auction and dance on Jan. 30 to help meet travel expenses for the Maryland's team's trip to Europe this summer.

Other fun auctions are scheduled on Saturday, Feb. 27, during the annual meeting of the Maryland Jersey Cattle Club and Friday evening, March 12, following the Maryland Holstein Convention banquet in the Comfort Inn at Frostburg.

Sire Power, Inc., of Tunkhannock, Pa., an artificial insemination organization, and the Robert Mong family of Waynesboro, Pa., have donated an outstanding Holstein heifer for which raffle tickets are being sold. A drawing to determine the calf's new owner — or the winner of $1,000 in cash — is scheduled May 15 during the Wills 4-H Show at the Howard County fairground near West Friendship.

Members of Maryland's 1992 national champion 4-H dairy cattle judging team - and their coaches point to European countries they hope to visit this summer in connection with their trip to the Royal Highland Show at Edinburgh, Scotland. Shown are, left to right, Brian D. Derr and Dr. J. Lee Majeskie, team coaches; Marie L. Speak, 17, of Taneytown; Kristi Geary, 17, of Goshen; Mark Iager, 16 of Fulton; and Christopher "Chip" Savage, 17, Burkittsville.

"As we read and hear about many problems with troubled youth in our society, we can be very pleased with the positive impact that 4-H dairy cattle judging programs and activities have had on Maryland youth," Majeskie said.

"Dedicated, hard work and a little luck helped these 4-H members achieve a goal that should have a positive impact on their lives. Their accomplishments are made possible by the strong support given by dairy producers, volunteer 4-H leaders, private organizations, the Maryland 4-H Foundation, the Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources and the University of Maryland system."

Information about fund-raising activities, the calf raffle, and other avenues of financial support for the Maryland 4-H dairy cattle judging team is available from Dr. J. Lee Majeskie, Department of Animal Sciences, University of Maryland, College Park, MD 20742-2311, (301) 405-1406.

CVC Holds Grower Meeting

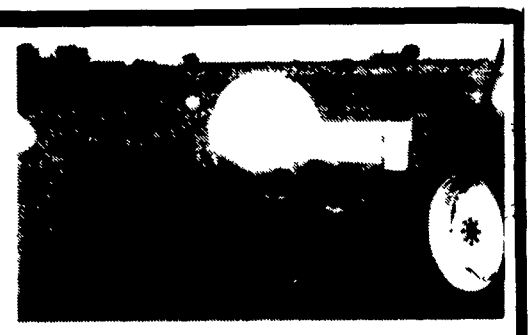
SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — More than 200 corn growers from Cumberland and Franklin counties attended the Cumberland Valley Cooperative (CVC) soup and sandwich day held at the new Shippensburg Firefighters Center on West Orange Street.

The meeting was sponsored by CVC, Ciba-Geigy Chemicals, Dow-Elanco Chemicals, and Hoffman Seeds.

Abbie Clark of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture also reviewed the credit program for private applicators licenses.

Door prizes were won by Sam Yoder, St. Thomas, ten 80 pound bags of CVC fertilizer; George Cubbler of Shppensburg, one bag of Hoffman seed corn; Robert E. Smith, Shippensburg, one blanket from Master Mix feeds; Noah Zimmerman, Shippensburg, one bag of Hoffman seed corn; and Francis Mains, Carlisle, one bag of Hoffman seed corn.

TOP 10 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BUY A TANCO BALE WRAPPER



TANCO	COMPETITION
1. Five (5) points of support on turntable: Four heavy duty rollers add stability and support to the perimeter of the turntable in addition to the main central shaft. This allows Tanco wrappers to safely wrap the heaviest silage bales on rough or uneven ground.	Competition uses one central shaft to support the entire turntable mechanism.
2. Single solid belt on turntable: The single belt enables Tanco wrappers to effectively wrap misshapen or soggy bales providing a positive surface for bale rotation.	Competition uses either no belts between rollers, or multiple belts which can allow bales to sag and slip.
3. Adjustable extendable axle: On trailed models the extendable axle provides a wide, stable wheel base when loading bales. Eliminates the need for counterweights.	Competition must add counterweights or tandem axles as options to effectively handle silage bales.
4. Top rollers on turntable: Extra rollers provide security to keep bales in place when wrapping at high RPM's (25) or on uneven terrain.	Competition - None.
5. Unloading ramp on trailed models: The ramp allows bales to be unloaded gently. When a wrapped bale falls hard it can "burp". Once it "burps" the bale does not re-seal. The ramp gives a smooth transition between the ground and turntable.	Competition - optional drop mats are available.
6. Turntable braking System: When unloading wrapped bales its important that the turntable doesn't move out of position. A twisted turntable can offload a bale crooked, exposing it to possible tearing of plastic on frame parts. Tanco machines are equipped with a braking system that holds the turntable in place when unloading bales.	Competition - either no system, or rely on hydraulics to hold the turntable.
7. Film indexing system: As temperature rises, plastic stretches more. To ensure proper overlap and complete coverage when it's hot outside, Tanco machines are equipped with an exclusive, simple, indexing system to compenstate for those times. The operator can eliminate potential "windows" in the wrapping procedure.	Competition - None.
8. Positive bale positioning: while being wrapped, bales are rotated the exact distance required to obtain optimum coverage.	Competition uses continuous hydraulic advance. Bales can slip or over-rotate giving an uneven wrap.
9. Durability: Tanco's subframe is the heaviest of any machine available in North America. The low profile design keeps silage bales closer to the ground with a low center of gravity for stability. Tanco's features are the result of years of experience and input from hundreds of individual, and commercial users in Europe.	Competition - Compare.
10. Prices: From a basic 3 point Model AW200, to the trailed Model AW400 with automatic cut & start, bale and batch counter, and tractor seat controls, Tanco prices for 1993 are lower than ever. Pay less for more features and durability than any other bale wrapper on the market.	Competition - Compare.

Deep-trough, air borne 14 in. belt carries 27% more feed than a flat 16 in. belt. 105% more than a flat 12 in. belt. Also, because 46% of the belt rides over thin air - instead of sliding on metal surface there's less drag. Requires less HP, less energy, reduces wear on the belt. Belt returns conditions for reduced friction.

Secretary Supports Strong Trade Agenda

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "We should not seek further cuts in commodity programs that do not have real budget impact and weaken our position relative to our trading partners," said newly-appointed Secretary of Agriculture Mike Espy, in his first scheduled public engagement. He was invited to address the 33rd membership meeting of the U.S. Feed Grains Council here recently.

"We will be able to do our part at USDA by achieving real savings and efficiency through a reorganization of the agency. We in Washington need to meet the needs of those I serve, and as I mentioned in my confirmation hearings, we need to modernize the department," said Espy.

The new administration faces many challenges and Espy has set priorities to "expand our trade and market opportunities, maintain farm income, promote rural development, protect our natural resources and meet the needs for safe, affordable foods."

Espy said, "I try not to make promises I cannot keep—but I can promise to be a listener, with a strong voice for rural America and agriculture." He shared with the audience that he is a strong supporter of international trade, promising to "aggressively seek out international markets, not only for bulk commodities, but for high-value products." The current administration "will find a way to resolve the purchasing problems of the former Soviet Republics and other important customers.

"I have spoken with U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and the President, and we have a strong commitment to seek fairness in our policies—fairness in agreements with our trading partners, fairness between different sectors of our economy, and a balancing of our priorities, including those on the domestic agenda." Reminding the audience that while the Clinton administration supports the NAFTA as good for long-term economic growth, they recognize the concerns of some producers that import and labor surges may occur. "It may require parallel agreements to maintain equity in the agreement," he said.

Acknowledging that the extension agreement for negotiation of the GATT is approaching, Espy stated that although the administration "would soon like to see the round successfully negotiated, we will present a tough approach when it comes to maintaining market access."

He said, "We must change policies which hinder our exports so that we again can achieve past milestones in agricultural production, however we are not going to back down at the negotiating table."

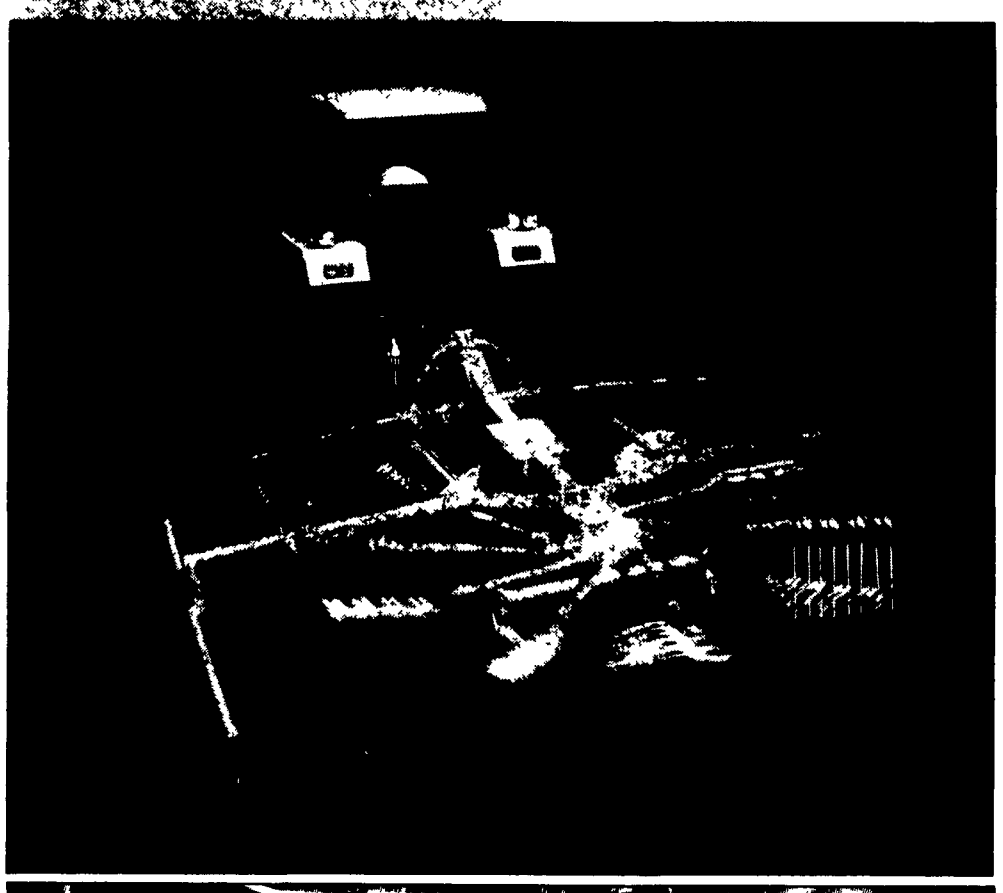
A turn for the better.



Kuhn's Gyrorake turns haymaking upside down with the 3-in-1 rake, windrow inverter and tedder. Windrow inversion is an essential process that not only allows hay to dry faster, but also decreases leaf loss as it increases nutrient levels. Get the job done fast with a Kuhn Gyrorake. It lets you match rotor and ground speeds to your crop conditions for gentle, efficient inverting.

But when it comes to Kuhn Gyrorakes, windrow inversion is just part of the story. The GA series offers gentle, high speed raking without roping. Side delivery enables you to double windrow. And if needed, the Gyrorake also is an effective tedder for fluffing and drying hay.

Kuhn Gyrorake is also available with special features to make the job go easier and faster. Wide flotation balloon tires (standard equipment) reduce ground pressure for more gentle treatment of crop stubble. The optional bogie axle tames even the roughest ground.

The Kuhn GA series of single rotor rakes is available in working widths of 10'6" to 13'. And for really big operations, there's the GA 7301 Twin Gyrorake with adjustable working widths from 21'4" to 24' for raking up to 17 acres per hour.

Kuhn Gyrorakes—taking a turn for the better so you'll turn out better hay.

ON-FARM BIOSECURITY

Robert E. Graybill, D.V.M.
Lancaster County
Swine Veterinarian

One of the main components of any control or cleanup plan is a thorough and strict biosecurity procedure to contain and prevent the spread of disease.

Pseudorabies (PR) cleanup can be frustrating or unsuccessful if biosecurity issues are not addressed. Many diseases such as PR, influenza, TGE, and dysentery are greater problems in the winter months because conditions favor their survival in the environment during that time of the year. This means that biosecurity is of critical importance now.

First, we must consider that the primary source of PR virus is probably the pig itself, and is spread either by direct contact or aerosol. All pig movements must be done in a way that minimizes the chance of disease spread between animals.

Spread between animals occurs when pigs of different age groups have close contact. Cull sows should never be kept in the finishing barn. Pig movements should be planned as all-in/all-out when possible.

The disease threat to younger animals of keeping tail-enders around is usually greater than losses from moving them out promptly. Additional walls or partitions may be necessary to gain greater separation between groups of animals.

Air supply needs to be sources from the outside, not from another group of hogs.

When tending pigs, work from the youngest to the oldest with frequent use of disinfecting foot pans, especially in the finishing barns. When they get dirty, foot pans quickly become ineffective at killing disease organisms, so replace the disinfectant solution often.

It is recommended to change coveralls and/or boots between the breeding and grow/finish herds. Equipment that is needed in several places on the farm should not be shared. Separate snares, syringes, or hog panels should be kept for each phase of the operation. If this is not possible, equipment should be thoroughly washed and disinfected between groups of animals to prevent disease transmission.

Common disinfectants are: formaldehyde-based (DC+R(R)), phenol-based (OneStroke Environ(R), Magnaphen(R), Biophene(R), Tek-Trol(R), others), quaternary ammoniums (Roccal-D(R), Zephiran(R)), tamed iodine (Betadine(R), others), and lye.

There are differences between disinfectants in toxicity, corrosiveness, and effectiveness in the presence of dirt and low temperatures. DC+R is not effective at temperatures below 60 degrees and can be dangerous to use if ventilation is inadequate. Lye and phenol based disinfectants are corrosive and can be dangerous to use. However, they are broad-spectrum disinfectants and are also the most effective disinfectants in the presence of dirt or low temperatures.

Quaternary ammoniums are very effective as long as the surfaces to be disinfected are not dirty. Disinfectants are effective only if adequate time is allowed for contact of the disinfectant with the surface. Exposure to sunlight and drying are also effective disinfecting procedures.

Rodents, dogs, and cats have been incriminated as sources of PR virus spread in a number of outbreaks. Rodents, pets, and birds also can transmit many other costly diseases (see the table). Therefore, excellent rodent and bird control is necessary on a continuous basis.

Rodents are attracted to areas piled with rubbish, so keep areas around hog buildings picked up. Pets should not be allowed access to hogs or hog buildings.

Proper disposal of dead pigs and placentas is very important to prevent spread of PR to neighboring hog units. PR virus can survive for up to a week in these tissues. Make sure your pets are not allowed to roam and do not have access to such material. Incineration and in-ground tanks with lids are probably the best methods for disposal.

Dedicated management and a positive attitude with a comprehensive and effective biosecurity plan are vital to the success of preventing or eliminating a disease from a swine production unit. Too often when a disease like PR hits, producers neglect proper on-farm biosecurity, inviting other devastating diseases.

Kari Works With Lactation Group

Frank W. Karl

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Frank W. Kari, a visiting scientist from the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences (NIEHS), works with Penn State's Lactation Research Group.

Kari, working from Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, is interfacing with Penn State faculty on several projects involving hormones and other growth factors. He is studying effects of certain milk hormones on newborns and directing a graduate student and a technician in developing an animal model called "pup in a cup."

Specifically, this system uses newborn rat pups in an artificial feeding setting to identify specific components of milk that may affect the nutrition and function of the newborn animal.

Members of Penn State's Lactation Research Group include Mary F. Picciano, Department of Nutrition; Clark E. Grosvenor, Department of Molecular and Cell Biology; and Craig R. Baumrucker, Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

Ag Letter Discusses On-Farm Recycling

READING (Berks Co.) — There's a subtle drive under way to have farmland supplement our landfills: some of the waste generated by towns and cities is being spread on farmers' fields.

In some cases, this is a good idea, according to the February issue of Meridian Bank's Ag Letter. When a farmer spreads lawn clippings or leaves on his fields, he's plowing down organic matter that might otherwise clog a landfill. Often, the farmer is paid at least a portion of the money a trash hauler would have to pay to dump his load at a landfill.

The most ambitious agricultural recyclers are members of the mushroom industry. "We've always been scavengers," Jamie Ciarrocchi told the Ag Letter. "As mushroom growers, we take by-products nobody else wants, use them to produce a crop, then we either sell the spent compost for potting soil or we give it to farmers to spread on their fields."

Ciarrocchi is a third-generation mushroom grower and vice president of Modern Mushroom, Inc., in Avondale.

Mushrooms grow in a composted mixture of hay and horse manure. The mix might also contain varying amounts of poultry manure, cottonseed hulls, corn cobs, straw, and a number of other ingredients. The composting process generates enough heat to kill any harmful bacteria in the raw materials, making the finished product an ideal medium for mushroom culture.

In addition to the agricultural by-products that go into the compost, the mushroom industry recycles its own runoff water. At Modern Mushroom, they also collect the rainwater that flows off the roofs and the condensate created by their refrigeration system.

The livestock industry has recently taken a page from the mushroom growers' handbook. Shredded newspaper is a new source of bedding for dairy cows, beef cattle and hogs, and is growing in popularity, according to David Varone, Berks County's recycling coordinator.

Varone told the Ag Letter that, in 1992, the program recycled more than 400 tons of old newspapers into bedding. If it hadn't been for the program, those newspapers might have gone to a landfill.

According to Varone, shredded newspaper is a highly absorbent bedding that breaks down completely by the time it is spread with manure on cropland.

John Garber, who farms just outside Elizabethtown, told the Ag Letter that he's happy to accept leaves from the nearby borough, because he believes it's a great idea to keep the leaves out of the landfill and the county incinerator.

"But I really think farmers should be paid for handling these things," he said.

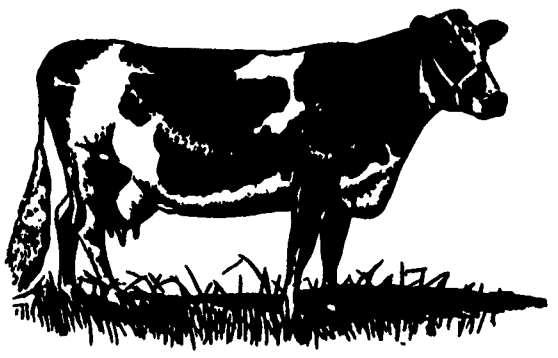
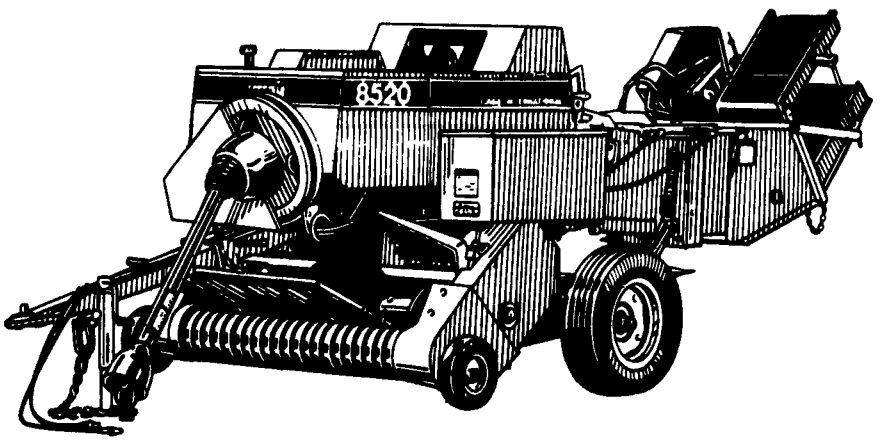
"Her" Choice





If Holsteins could talk, the conversation around the hay manger would be "Case IH Center Line Balers".

Why? More leaves per bale.

Our low profile pickup allows alfalfa hay to retain more dry leaves. We don't lift the windrow as high, saving leaves at the pickup. We also start to compress the hay before it enters the chamber to lock in leaves throughout the flake...leaves don't settle to the bottom and fall out the back of the baler to the degree of older style square balers.

More leaves means more milk, without increased overhead. Many studies show increased production of $1,000 per year over a milking herd of 100 with 2% leaf savings!

52,333 Bushels Of Grain Under Loan

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Berks County farmers pledged 52,333 bushels of 1992-crop corn as collateral for nine-month recourse loans, according to Richard Troutman, chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

"Traditionally, recourse loans have been available on high moisture feed grains as part of our price support program and for commodities stored on the ground or in unapproved structures," Troutman said.

In 1992, ASCS authorized producers whose 1992-crop grain did not meet the minimum quality requirements to pledge that grain as collateral for a recourse loan.

"Loan rates were determined on the grade of the crop, based on the test weight," said Troutman, "and reflected the applicable loan discounts." The grain is not eligible for entry into the farmer-owned reserve.

The ASCS official said distress loans are loans made on grain stored on the ground or in unapproved structures. Other recourse loans are mainly grains with low test weight.

Farm Leader Attends Agway Meeting

Agway committee vice chairman John Hotlenstein, right, visited with Bill Shank, Energy Group region 8 mgr., at the Agway Council meeting in Harrisburg. Chairs of more than 60 local Agway committees provided grassroots advice and comments to the farm cooperative's leaders during the two-day conference.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — John Hotlenstein of Lancaster was one of 60 Agway committee leaders attending the Agway Council meeting in Harrisburg recently.

Hotlenstein is vice chairman of the New Holland store Agway Committee, which represents several hundred area Agway members.

The cooperative leaders heard Ralph H. Heffner, Agway board chairman, describe a new, geographically-based committee system which is being established in the northeastern states to improve member participation in the cooperative.

All Agway operations within a geographic area will benefit from the ideas and suggestions of a committee elected by Agway members in that area. In the past, local Agway committees have been oriented around a specific Agway store or energy plant.

Heffner also stated that while Agway is strengthening its emphasis on agricultural, consumer retailing, and energy products marketing. Its diversified subsidiaries in leasing, insurance, and food marketing are an important part of the organization.

Charles F. Saul, president and general manager, reported that Agway is successfully revitalizing the organization through a program called "Customer Driven: 1995." The three-year project, which began in early 1992, is ahead of schedule with organizational changes and new customer-oriented sales programs already producing improved results.

Saul told members that Agway is establishing telephone customer service centers for farm supply ordering, expanding the farm sales force, consolidating feed mills and other facilities to improve efficiency, modernizing crop centers, and upgrading the Agway consumer retail store and franchised representative system.

Saul reported good cost control throughout Agway and its subsidiaries, including Agway Energy Products, Telmark leasing, insurance, and Country Foods businesses. Agway also owns controlling interest in Curtice Burns Foods, a regional brand fruit and vegetable marketing company, and H.P. Hood, a major Northeast dairy foods marketing company.

The committee chairmen also heard reports from other Agway leaders and participated in discussions expressing their ideas and suggestions about Agway's plans for changing some of its methods of providing quality products and improved services to farmers and other customers in local communities.

STRAY VOLTAGE

What Is It?

Stray voltage is the electrical current that is sometimes present on "grounded" metal equipment around farm buildings. It's also called transient voltage, tingle voltage, and neutral-to-earth voltage.

If, for example, a strong enough voltage is present on a nipple waterer, electricity will pass through a hog to the floor when he stops by for a drink of water. And provided the current flow is high enough, the hog may reduce his water intake or be just plain irritable.

How Do We Measure Stray Voltage?

With a voltmeter, of course, but not any one will do. First, the voltmeter must be able to separate direct current and alternating current. Because of low levels of electrolysis that might occur around manure and metal, some direct current may be present in the building. This is of little consequence but the meter must be able to block it or it will provide a false high reading.

A simple test recently demonstrated to me by Dr. Steve Spencer is to measure the voltage on a dry cell while the voltmeter is set for alternating current. If the voltmeter is blocking the direct current, the reading will be 0.

Second, a 500-1000 ohm resistor (sometimes called a banana plug) must be connected in parallel to leads on the voltmeter. This resistance approximates that of the hog, so that whatever voltage you measure, will also approximate the voltage sensed by the hog.

Finally, to be sure that your measurements are consistent, always measure the voltage between the equipment (waterer, feeder, etc.) and a ground rod driven away from the building.

Where Does Stray Voltage Come From?

Shorts in electrical equipment, unbalanced 120-volt loads on a 240-volt service, improper grounding of equipment, and dirt or corrosion around electrical connections are just a few sources.

Occasionally, the voltage enters through the neutral lead from the power company itself, but more often the problem starts somewhere on the farm.

What Are The Effects On Hog Production?

Studies show that hogs can sense a current flow of about .25 milliamps. Assuming the hog has a resistance of 1000 ohms, that translates to only .25 volts. When the voltage reaches a high enough level, hogs reduce their drinking time. Still higher voltages will reduce water and feed intake.

Pigs often appear agitated or restless during periods of high stray voltage. Stray voltage may occur only when certain equipment or fans are operating, so it isn't constant. And it may fluctuate with the electrical demand experienced by power plant.

As the shown in Table 1, it depends on the study:

Table 1. Effects of stray voltage on hog production

RESEARCHER	VOLTAGE	EFFECT
Gustafson	3 V	Drinking time reduced
Stetson	.5 V	Agitation and reduced water consumption in sows
Kaune	.275 V	Disruption in watering behavior
Gillespie	(not measured)	Reduced water consumption & appetite until ground corrected
Wright	3.7 V	Water consumption reduced 25%
Robert	5 V	Drinking time reduced

In most studies, problems didn't start until the potential exceeded 2 volts. But the Stetson study did document unusual behavior in lactating sows at a level of only .5 volts.

How Do You Correct Stray Voltage?

Correcting the problem is generally easy. Finding he source is the challenge.

Use a qualified electrician to assist. Often the power company is more than willing to help.

Some solutions that have been documented:

- Installation of improved ground rods
- Replacement of connections on main wiring
- Installation of a neutral isolating switch (isolates stray voltage originating from power company on neutral wire)
- Replacement of faulty motors, switches or other electrical devices
- Correction of unbalanced loads in circuit panel
- Bonding and grounding of crates, penning, and other equipment.

Summary

1. Stray voltage is electrical current that may pass from waterers or equipment through the hog when it contacts the equipment. If the potential is high enough, hogs will drink and eat less, and may show agitation. Watch for these signs, and contact an electrician or your county agent if you suspect a problem.

2.Stray voltage usually originates from poor grounds, faulty equipment, or unbalanced 120-volt loads on a 240-volt service. Finding the source of the stray voltage is sometimes difficult, but once the source is identified, it's normally easy to correct.

3. Most studies show that hogs are not adversely affected until the potential reaches 2 volts. But if you have a problem, take actions whenever practical to reduce the reading to less than .5 volts.

Swine Producers Can Benefit From MEW, Says Researcher

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — In some cases, swine finishers can see their pigs go to market twice as fast by using a modified form of medicated early weaning (MEW), according to Dr. Barry Wiseman, University of Minnesota.

Wiseman presented information about the ongoing research into MEW at the recent annual Swine Serviceman's and Key Industry Specialist Seminar hosted by Pfizer Animal Health last week at Yoder's Restaurant. About 100 swine producers and industry representatives attended the seminar.

While MEW can potentially realize profits on a per-finishing hog basis, producers can find that using MEW can be expensive, because of the increase use of medication, labor, and other factors. But swine producers can see their product go to market up to a month early if a careful program is followed.

The important detail to remember about using MEW, however, according to Wiseman, is to "get them eating and drinking as soon as you can," he said. He also cautioned swine producers to look carefully at the economics — the overall cost of production — to determine if modified MEW is best for them.

Overall, however, MEW pigs have better slaughter scores. Results of the studies at the university proved that MEW pigs had better lung scores, better snout scores, less disease prevalance, better average daily gain, better feed efficiency, and improved survivability.

Producers should also understand that MEW pigs should be kept separate from the rest of the herd. If they must be mixed with different pigs, health considerations must be carefully considered.

In addition, complex, high quality rations must be used. Nursery costs will also increase, but overall herd costs will decrease. There is also an increase in labor costs, but, on the market, using MEW could allow producers to garner as much as $4 extra per pig, according to Wiseman.

Some farms in North Carolina using MEW are realizing as much as $14 per pig cost savings, he said.

But health is of primary concern, even if not using MEW, according to the swine researcher. More often, the problems a swine producer could be experiencing originate from a "management factor" rather than a disease.

To help prevent management problems from causing herd problems, swine producers should consider using a special computer program for about $1,200 called PigCHAMP, available from the University of Minnesota. The herd database management program, menu-driven and user friendly, can help the breeder or finisher incorporate extensive herd records and breeding, reproduction, and diagnostic series reports.

Wiseman detailed all the features of PigCHAMP, which allows users to spot problems in management that could be costing them dollars.

A premier feature of PigCHAMP, according to Wiseman, is the database applications that allow the producer to use data to look at a wide variety of information about the herd and to pinpoint areas where herd profitability can be improved.

An important feature in the computer program is keeping track of the pigs that are born alive. "Born alive is the most important factor in the profitability on the farm," said Wiseman. The more pigs a producer is obtaining per sow, the better for the business bottom line.

In the case of one study, sow nonproductive days (NPDs) were cutting into farm profitability. Nonproductive sows use up feed,

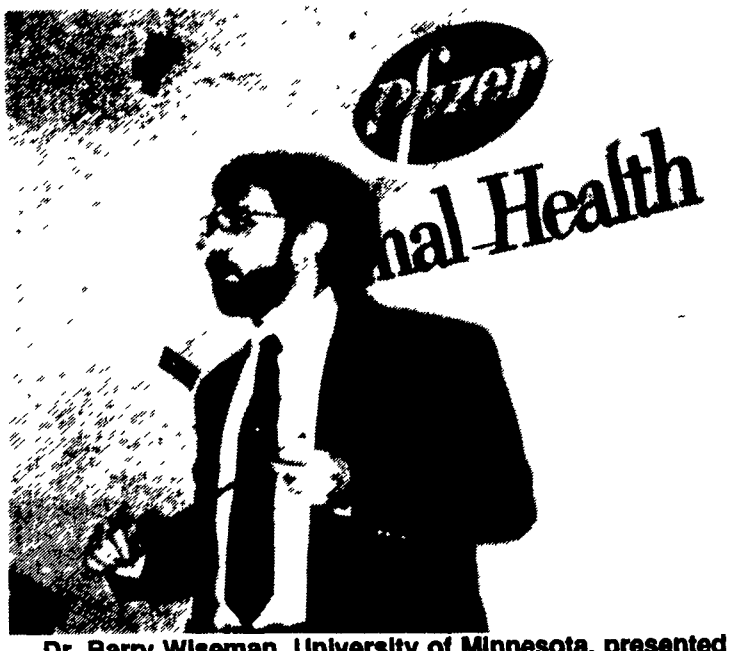
Monty B. McCaw, DVM, North Carolina State University College of Veterinary Medicine, spoke about porcine reproductive and respiratory synndrome (PRRS) and ways producers can identify and handle the problem.



Dr. Barry Wiseman, University of Minnesota, presented information about the ongoing research into MEW at the recent annual Swine Serviceman's and Key Industry Specialist Seminar hosted by Pfizer Animal Health last week at Yoder's Restaurant.

Dr. Dreyfus Froe, Pfizer, Inc., said producers should be careful in treating diseases to make sure the problem is correctly identified and to make sure drug concentrations are "in the places they have to be."

Md. Tobacco Auctions Begin March 16

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The 1993 Maryland Tobacco auction season will begin March 16 and will last four weeks, closing April 8, according to Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Robert L. Walker.

His announcement follows recommendations of the State Tobacco Authority, which proposed the sales dates after consulting with tobacco buyers, warehouse managers, and growers.

Sales will be held at the six public warehouses located at Wayson's Corner, Waldorf, Upper Marlboro (two) and Hughesville (two).

The Maryland Department of Agriculture's Marketing Services will provide daily sales reports during the season over its "Tobacco Report" toll-free number. Those interested in following the market can hear the report after 11:30 a.m. each day by calling (800) 638-2207.

heat, and space while not contributing litters.

One user of PigCHAMP at the conference maintains 1,000 head of sows in a local farrow-to-finish operation and said it took him about two hours a week to record the information and use the program, which is useful in his operation.

Dr. Dreyfus Froe, Pfizer, Inc., said producers should be careful in treating diseases to make sure the problem is correctly identified and to make sure drug concentrations are "in the places they have to be." One particular swine disease, which causes heavy losses for producers, is Salmonella choleraesuis, which affects the entire body of the animal, and particularly the lungs. Several drugs from Pfizer are available to treat Salmonella choleraesuis, including Mecadox feed additive and Terramycin-343 additive, a water soluable powder antiobiotic.

Monty B. McCaw, DVM, North Carolina State University College of Veterinary Medicine, spoke about porcine reproductive and respiratory synndrome (PRRS) and ways producers can identify and handle the problem.

Ken Burrell, national sales manager for Motomco, Ltd., spoke about using several forms of rodent control and a wide array of products available for the producer. What is important, however, is to manage the site that may have the infestation, and to "keep it clean," he said. "Pick up messes, sweep it up."

If eliminating rats, mice will often remain, and can cause most of the problems in the spread of disease and other problems. A male that mates with a female can produce a litter of 20,000 unchecked in a year or 20 million in three years.

More and more, producers will be facing less and less products available to control rodents in light of tighter EPA regulations.

Several products introduced for control of rodents, particularly mice, included Hawk rodenticides, Tomcat, and Hawk Super Chunx.

Case Presents New Row Crop Cultivators

RACINE, Wis. — J I Case recently announced the introduction of its Case International 1800 Series Row Crop Cultivators.

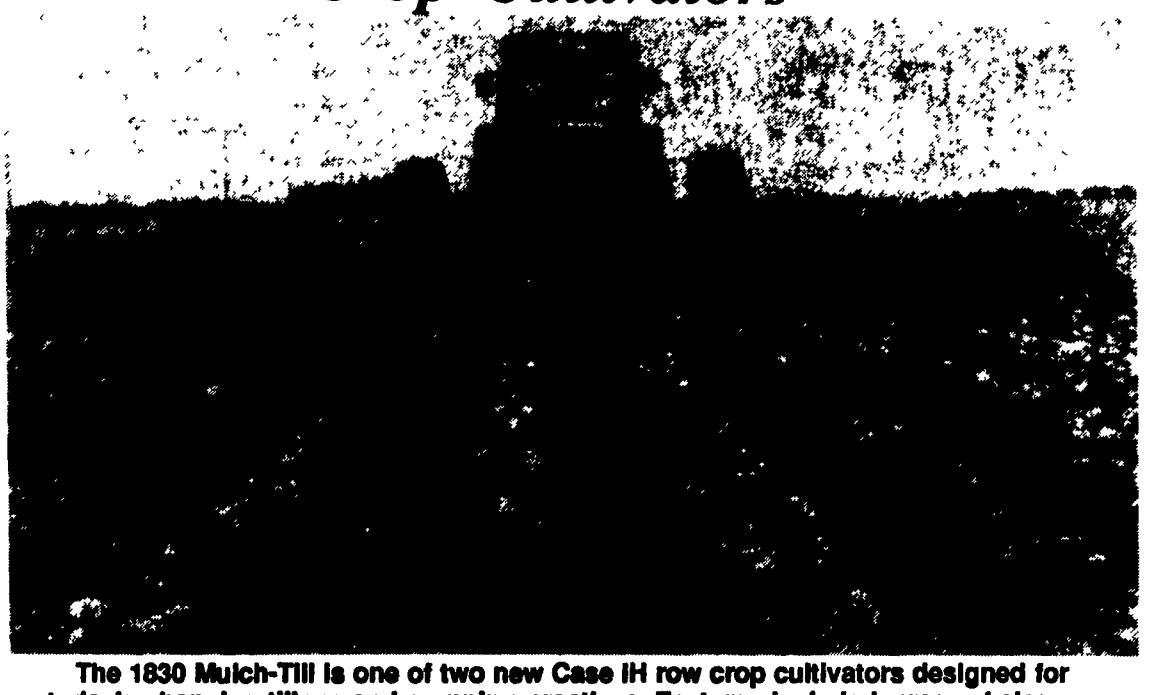
The 1820 and the 1830 Mulch-Till, available in a wide range of sizes as well as rigid or folding configurations, complement the company's 184 Series Min-Till units and round out the Case International line of weed-control tillage tools.

The 1800 Series replaces the 183 Series rear-mounted cultivators. Kurt Schenck, Case product management-implements, noted that the new models are designed with increased clearance between shanks and sweeps, three choices of ground-working tools, three crop-shield options, improved gauge-wheel adjustment, and enhanced residue-handling capability to adapt to today's changing tillage and cropping practices.

The Model 1820 measures 28.8 inches tip to tip, from front sweep to rear sweep and The 1830 Mulch-Till measures 40 inches. According to Schenck, the 1830 has more residue-handling capability than previous Case International models.

The three types of ground-working tools available with the 1800 Series cover a full range of soil conditions and operating needs. Vibra Tines® are recommended for high-speed operations where only small weeds and light soils are of concern. Vibra Shanks®, a Case International exclusive, are ideal for heavier weeds and rocky conditions. The new Fibra Till® Shank, lighter than the Vibra Shank yet heavier than the Vibra Tine, is recommended for medium weed density and slightly rocky conditions.

Operators of the 1800 Series have a choice of three types of crop shields. For average ground conditions and operating speeds, the Case International rolling shield is recommended. Other shield choices include a new blade shield for faster operating speeds in all cropping practices, and a new tent shield, ideal for smaller row crops and specialty crops such as vegetables, at normal or fast operating speeds. Blade and tent shields are available in 38- or 50-inch lengths to protect vulnerable crops from residue or soil thrown from even the rear-most sweep, regardless of working speed.



The 1830 Mulch-Till is one of two new Case IH row crop cultivators designed for today's changing tillage and cropping practices. Features include increased clearance between shanks and sweeps, choice of ground-working tools and crop-shield options, improved gauge-wheel adjustment, and enhanced residue-handling capability.

Adjustable gauge wheels are standard on the 1800 Series. Schenck noted that gauge-wheel adjustment is a convenient, one-person, no-tool operation. The operator simply removes the depth-control pin from the position it is in and places it in the position desired. A quick glance will tell the operator if depth is set evenly across the machine.

Do Lower Tire Pressures Boost Tractor Performance?

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — If you're a farmer, there may be good reasons to let a little air out of your tires.

"Some tire manufacturers are promoting the use of low air pressures in radial tires for tractors," said Donald Daum, professor of agricultural engineering in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "They've suggested that using pressures as low as 6 or 8 pounds per square inch can increase traction and save fuel, boosting tractor efficiency.

"Field tests have shown improvements in traction, fuel use and field capacity," said Daum. "Lower tire pressure also puts less pressure on the soil, resulting in less compaction near the soil surface."

Radial tires can appear underinflated when they are not, prompting some people to overinflate them. "If your radial tires are overinflated, lowering tire pressures probably would improve tractor performance," Daum said. "But too little air pressure can cause problems, so be careful if you're considering using a lower pressure.

"First of all, keep in mind that low pressures are recommended only for radial tires, not for bias-ply tires," Daum said. "The sidewalls of bias-ply tires would fail in a very short time at these low pressures."

Don't exceed a tire's weight-carrying capacity. "Always follow the manufacturer's load capacity guidelines. Tires must contain enough air to carry the weight put on them. For example, a set of 18.4R38 dual tires can safely carry a load of 8,560 pounds at 14 psi, but only 6,180 pounds at 8 psi."

Even if you cannot go to the limit, you can boost efficiency by reducing tire pressures to the minimum needed to safely carry the load. "Field tests in Ohio showed that reducing tire pressure from 20 psi to 14 psi can improve performance significantly," Daum said. "Lower tire pressures also may reduce or eliminate power hop."

Loads on tires can be determined by weighing the tractor one axle at a time. "Be sure to include any mounted equipment, towed equipment that puts weight on the drawbar, a full fuel tank, and the operator as well as ballast," said Daum. "To find the load per tire, divide the total axle weight by the number of tires."

Single tires must be inflated to higher pressures to carry loads that would be shared by duals or triples. "This usually limits the low-pressure concept to dual or triple tires," Daum said. "Some manufacturers recommend that the minimum inflation pressure for single radial tires remain the same, typically 12 or 14 psi."

Be sure to use an accurate tire pressure gauge to check tires weekly, and always check pressures when the tires are cool. "This is vital if you plan to use lower pressures," said Daum. "A 2 psi difference at 20 psi is only a 10 percent error, but a 2 psi difference at 8 psi is a 25 percent error."

More information is available in the fact sheet "Lower Pressures for Radial Tires?" FARM SAFETY

Safety, whether on the farm, on the road, or in the home, is one of those topics that people say they are conscious of, but often do little to practice until there is a major accident.

However, by that time, it may be too late.

The loss or major injury to a child or spouse is hard for anyone to cope with, but when you know it could have been prevented, the tragedy is almost too much to handle.

For the fourth year in a row, Chester County Extension and Octorara Vo-Ag Department are offering a 14-hour "Tractor & Farm Machinery Safety Education Course."

The program is held in the Octorara Vo-Ag classroom for four evenings, April 6, 13, 20 and 26, from 6:30-9:30 p.m., with a final test on Saturday, May 1, from 8 a.m.-noon.

The course is designed for youth, particularly those between 14 and 16 years old, who plan to work on a farm other than their parents' operation. If they successfully complete the course, they will receive a PA Department of Labor certificate allowing them to operate certain machinery for their employer.

It is not a license to drive on the road before age 16.

This is also an excellent program for sons and daughters of farmers. Although they are not required to have a certificate to work on the home farm, the safety instruction included in the course could save their lives.

As many of you know, teen-agers sometimes listen to others better than to mom and pop. Young people from 12 years old up to any age can take the course, but certificates can only be issued to those 14 or older.

The program consists of classroom instruction and hands-on tractor work. Topics such as tractor instruments, controls, maintenance and safety checks are covered along with discussions on hitches, PTO's, and hydraulics.

Students learn proper starting and stopping procedures for tractors as well as how to hitch to and back up two-wheel and four-wheel implements.

On the final day, participants take written and driving tests to complete the program.

There are also safety demonstrations. A State Police trooper will present one of the sessions about proper road safety for farm machinery.

The limited time does not make the student an excellent tractor driver, but he or she is exposed to a variety of safety concerns and is taught how to avoid problems.

For more information and reservations, contact Walter Wurster, at county extension, (215) 696-3500, by April 1.

Holstein Tour

The Chester County Holstein Club will take their annual dairy tour to six registered Holstein farms in Columbia, Lycoming and Sullivan counties on Thursday, March 18, 1993.

For more details and reservations, call Dick Hostetter at (215) 857-2780. Deadline for reservations is March 13.

Understand Reports

Chester County DHIA members can receive a new loose-leaf book entitled "Understanding How to Make Pa. DHIA Reports Work for You." It is available on request.

Talk to your technician or call 1-800-DHI-TEST to order your copy. The book lists all the options available today and explains in detail all the reports that a dairy farmer may select and how to use them.

The book will be updated as new programs and reports are created. It is the most comprehensive explanation of DHIA ever compiled in Pennsylvania.

Dairymen can make better use of their records by using this reference.

White-New Idea Introduces Side Delivery Spreader

COLDWATER, Ohio — White-New Idea introduced a new side delivery spreader at the National Farm Machinery Show in Louisville, Ky., recently.

The new "SideKick" spreader features several design advancements when compared to other side delivery spreaders currently available. These advancements are allowing White-New Idea to offer an industry-leading three-year parts and labor warranty in addition plus a 10-year warranty against rust through.

A major design advancement is the vertical expeller system. Each expeller features notched, angled beater tips to shred and throw the manure. The two expellers were designed to work together so coverage is even from side to side.

Another major design advancement is the twin auger system which feeds manure to the vertical expellers. The twin augers feed the expellers at the same rate they expel the manure. This eliminates the need for an operator to control the auger feed rate. The twin auger design also, inherently, creates a wider floor area and steeper sides. The steep sides eliminate the need for the operator to break through bridged manure by raising and lowering the augers.

The twin augers are driven by a planetary gear drive system which is more reliable than the chain and hydraulic drive systems used on competitive models. The planetary drive system "muscles" the augers to break through frozen manure and other tough conditions.

Both the twin auger feeder system and the vertical expeller system have been tested with manure types ranging from hard pen-pack cattle manure to sticky and gritty poultry manure to nearly liquid confinement manure to long straw. Prototypes were tested by more than 50 livestock producers who ran more than 10,000 on-farm loads over three years.

Three models are being offered. The model 3214 has a capacity of 280 bushels (1441 gallons). The model 3222 has a capacity of 408 bushels (2247 gallons). The largest model, 3229, has a capacity of 485 bushels (2955 gallons). Optional hydraulic lids are available on the two larger models. The two larger models can also be mounted on a customer-supplied truck for ease of transporting longer distances.

For more information, call (800) 767-3221.

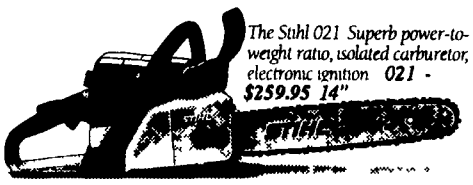
The Chain Saws For People Who Want To Act Like Lumberjacks, Not Work Like Them.



The Stihl 021 Superb power-to-weight ratio, isolated carburetor, electronic ignition 021 - $259.95 14"

The Stihl 023 All the features of the 021, plus 30% more power 023 - $294.95 16"

The Stihl 025 More powerful than the 023, plus convenient side chain tensioner 025 - $319.95 16"

The Stihl 026 Designed for professional use, or the demanding weekend-woodcutter 026 - $379.95 16"

If you know a little about the timber business, you know that Stihl chain saws have been used by professional woodcutters for over sixty years

So maybe you think Stihl equipment is "too good" for a suburbanite or farmer or anyone else who needs to cut wood on an occasional basis

Well, we're happy to tell you that Stihl makes a whole series of chain saws with your needs in mind

All Stihl saws are designed for performance, ease of handling and starting, and durability.

Now, about the 026 shown at the bottom: we'll admit we sell this saw to professional woodcutters But it's also bought by people who simply put a lot of hours on a saw every year.

And by the way, when were you ever unhappy because you bought a product that was too good?

For The Part Of You That Promised You'd Never Compromise.

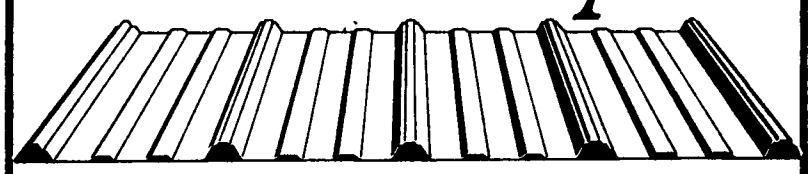
Rural Economy



Cost-efficient Centurydrain™ roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that
- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

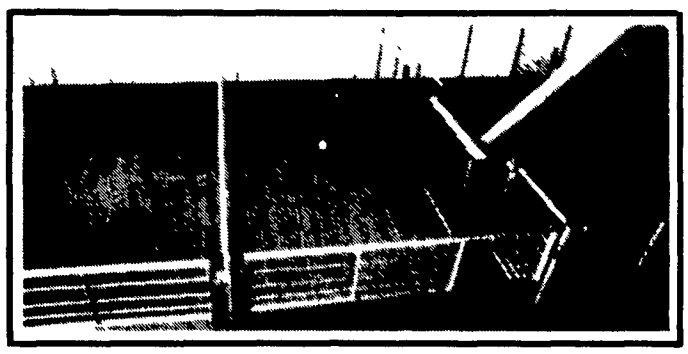
CONFINEMENT STALL

Developed recently in our R&D farm. Our goals were convenience, safety and durability. The low back and flat top rails are easy to reach over with no sharp edges. Stainless steel rear legs and front feet along with solid steel horizontal rods through punched uprights provide the strongest, most durable stall ever produced by Tri-County (21"-24" O.C. x 86").

PIG SAVER "DUTCH CRATE"

Developed through testing in our research farms. the goal was to develop a crate that nearly eliminates crushing, due to lay ons, unmatched durability and be easy to work around. All this has been achieved by a unique gravity fliprail that forces sows to tie down slowly and using stainless steel for rear doors and legs, proven horizontal and solid steel rod construction. All this at a reasonable cost. Crate also can be installed on an angle.



NURSERY PENNING

Nursery penning has been improved by the use of an optional solid stainless steel panel on the front gates which keeps walkways clean. Stainless steel verticals on penning eliminates corrosion where penning attaches to the floor. Stainless steel drinker pipes & mounting brackets also increase durability.

FINISHING PENNING

Optional stainless steel verticals and fasteners offer improved durability over other similar types of penning. Loop and flapper latch arrangement eliminates the use of drop pins. Stainless steel fence line feeders provide excellent durability and a minimum of waste.

PHEASANT MANURE PRODUCTION AND NUTRIENT MANAGEMENT

Dr. Paul H. Patterson
Assistant Professor
Poultry Science

Many states have either enacted nutrient management legislation for livestock and agronomic enterprises or are considering such legislation — the latter is the case for Pennsylvania. We at the University are trying to gather accurate, up-to-date information about the amount of manure produced by poultry and its nutrient composition.

In Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation has funded a project to determine the quantity and chemical composition of poultry manures. Researchers in the Department of Poultry Science at Penn State are weighing and testing manure from broilers, turkeys, layers, pullets, and game birds. Such information is needed before meaningful legislation can be enacted.

Preliminary results from a study housing 50 Ringneck pheasant chicks, initially in battery brooders then in grow-out pens to 17 weeks of age, have just been tallied. The birds, donated by the Pennsylvania Game Commission, grew to an average weight of 2.2 pounds in 17 weeks under the confinement conditions.

Cumulative feed consumption and manure production on a 100 percent DM basis were 13.9 and 4.4 pounds per bird, respectively, for the 17-week trial. These numbers may appear a little foreign to many of us who deal with feed and manure on an "as is" basis (approximately 90 percent DM feed and approximately 25 percent DM manure). Feed and manure presented on an "as is" basis would be approximately 15.4 pounds of feed consumed and 17.6 pounds of manure produced.

Because of the variable nature of manure moisture, all of the samples were dried to a 100 percent DM basis to express the nutrient concentration. However, for the pheasant grower or farmer that might apply the manure on fields, it should be presented as the average of a 25 percent DM, 75 percent moisture sample: Ammonia-N 0.24 percent; total-N 1.94 percent; P2O5 1.34 percent; K2O 0.68 percent; calcium 0.70 percent, and magnesium 0.15 percent. On a fresh manure basis, a ton of pheasant manure would contain about 39 pounds N, 27 pounds P2O5, and 14 pounds of K2O.

Diet and bird management can influence the amount and concentration of nutrients in all poultry manure.

Feeder's Edge Program Practices What It Teaches

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — How does a successful feeder control feed costs while producing a quality product? How does the new strategic alliances program work? Will hot fat trimming affect the future of the price discovery? How do retailers determine the grocery store cost of beef?

You aren't the only ones asking these and other questions about how the different aspects of the industry come together. Participants in the Limousin Feeder's Edge Program have asked them, too. And they will learn the answers at the second annual Feeder's Edge Hands-On Educational Opportunity in Denver, March 19-20.

For the second year in a row, the Limousin Feeder's Edge Program, sponsored by the North American Limousin Foundation (NALF), will teach participants about the varied facets of the cattle industry, from feeding and risk management to packing and retailing, in order to help them achieve an involved, hands-on approach to the cattle industry.

Producers from all over the country will learn first-hand about feeding and quality management when they travel to Anderson Farms and Cattle Company in Longmont, Colo. Jim Anderson, winner of the National Cattlemen's Association's Businessman of the Year Award, will conduct a tour of the feedyard and Texas A&M's Dr. Bill Mies will speak on feedyard management. Michael Smith from the Colorado Cattle Feeders Association will discuss total quality management.

Integration, market analysis, and data collection will be the topics as the group visits the National Cattlemen's Association (NCA) in Englewood. Dr. Chuck Lambert, NCA's director of economics, and John Stowell, manager of the Cattlemen's Carcass Data Collection Service, will talk about strategic alliances and data collection. Price discovery and beef featuring will be the topics of discussions with Randy Blach, CattleFax's director of market analysis.

The spotlight will be on retailing, an often-ignored aspect of the industry during a field trip to Safeway supermarket complete with a tour through the meat trimming and packaging facilities and question-and-answer session with a meat procurement specialist.

The seminar will look at supply and demand as participants hold a mock futures trading and risk management session. They'll learn about the driving force behind it all as palatability and consumer preference take the floor at Colorado State University in Fort Collins. Dr. J. Brad Morgan, CSU extension meat scientist, will conduct a palatability test luncheon comparing different cuts and cooking temperatures. Morgan will also discuss progress toward value based marketing. Participants will hear Dr. J. Daryl Tatum, CSU professor of meat sciences, speak on red meat yield as a new selling formula.

Feeder's Edge cattle owners will get an update on their pens in the late afternoon, when Miguel de Achaval of Cactus Feeders in Amarillo, Texas leads a session on the Feeder's Edge cattle on feed. For more information on the Feeder's Edge Program or Hands-On Educational Seminar, call NALF at (303) 220-1693.

Organizations Urge Support For Investigation Of EPA

RALEIGH, N.C. — A group of 23 farm and tobacco organizations is urging congressional support for investigations surrounding the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) conduct in classifying environmental tobacco smoke as a group A carcinogen.

In a resolution circulated to congressional leaders on capitol hill, the twenty-three organizations call for "all representatives and senators with an interest in family farmers and scientific integrity to support congressional inquiries into the extremely questionable process by which the EPA reached its conclusions."

The final version of the EPA risk assessment on environmental tobacco smoke (ETS), which was released on January 7, is shrouded in controversy over the credibility of EPA's science. The General Accounting Office is now conducting an investigation into EPA's scientific review process and handling of ETS. In addition, EPA's own inspector general is investigating contracting irregularities for a workplace smoking guide.

Of particular concern to drafters of the resolution is the precedent setting change in the way EPA analyzed the statistical data on ETS. The groups charge that EPA manipulated the data on ETS to hit a predetermined antitobacco policy goal.

Fred Bond, chief executive of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation in Raleigh, N.C., said that EPA altered its own established guidelines to classify ETS as a group A carcinogen. Bond said, "when EPA first analyzed the scientific studies on tobacco smoke, they found that the data was too weak to support the group A classification. Then, violating their own established procedure, EPA lowered their scientific requirements so that ETS could fall into the group A classification. EPA has clearly chosen to ignore the scientific data in pursuit of its policy goals against tobacco."

"EPA has applied a double standard and demonstrated extreme bias in making this risk assessment," said Danny McKinney, chief executive of the Burley Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association in Lexington, Ky. "I firmly believe that a risk assessment based on such weak and clearly manipulated data would not have been issued by EPA on any other product. With substances other than tobacco, it's common to see results of scientific studies reported as too weak to be conclusive. But in this case, EPA would not accept the fact that the scientific studies do not support their anti-tobacco agenda."

The resolution sponsors have also asked why one of the largest and most comprehensive studies of ETS completed to date was not included in EPA's risk assessment. In November 1992, the American Journal of Public Health published the findings of a study on ETS conducted by the National Cancer Institute.

The National Cancer Institute study reported no statistically significant increase in nonsmoker lung cancer risk based on exposure to environmental tobacco smoke. In fact, 80 percent of the studies that were included in EPA's risk assessment showed no statistically significant association between nonsmoker lung cancer risk and ETS. Critics charge that EPA's selective use of scientific studies confirms that politics rather than science were at work in making this risk assessment.

Clinic For Well Owners

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Concerned about the quality of your drinking water? If you depend on your own well or spring, you should be.

"The quality of water from a private supply is the responsibility of its owner," said Leon Ressler, Penn State extension agent in agriculture and environmental issues, Lancaster County. "If you don't test your water, no one else will."

Persons whose water supply is from a private well should plan to attend a free "Safe Drinking Water Clinic" sponsored by the adult farmer program of the Ephrata Area School District, under the direction of Charles Ackley, agriculture education teacher.

The meeting will be held on March 9 at 7:45 p.m. in the Ephrata Senior High School Audion Room.

Ressler will speak on water quality issues in Lancaster County, drinking water quality problems, ground water quality, proper well construction, water testing and interpretation of water test results, and water treatment for private water systems.

Dr. Robert Thee will address radon in drinking water. He will discuss how radon enters your water, what risks are associated with it, and how to treat contaminated water. Thee joined Penn State extension in 1988 as a multi-county agent serving Lancaster, Montgomery, and Chester counties. He works with a variety of programs, including residential property management for part-time landlords, tenant education, the home purchase process for first-time buyers, barrier-free housing, radon, lead poisoning prevention, indoor air quality, and household waste management.

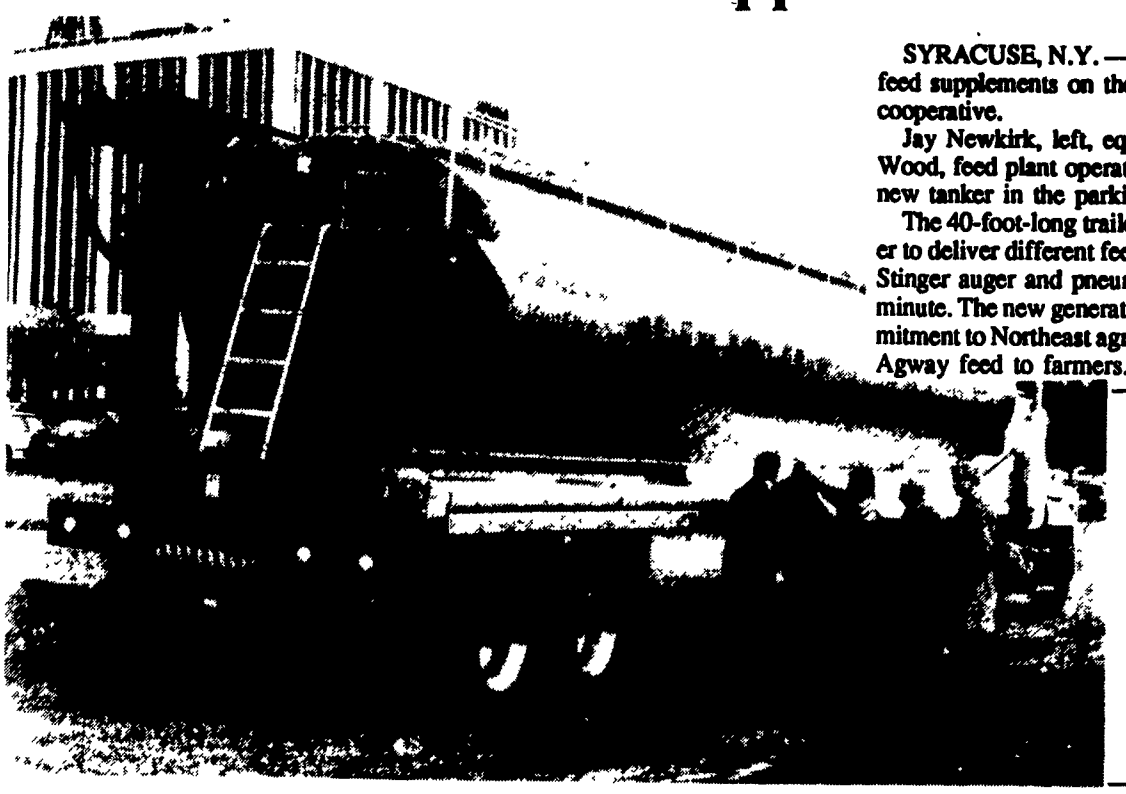
Fender Carries Supplements



SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Agway officials inspect a canvas-covered fender designed to carry bags of feed supplements on the first of 18 new bulk feed delivery trucks recently ordered by the farm cooperative.

Jay Newkirk, left, equipment manager; Joel Newman, agriculture group vice president; Dave Wood, feed plant operations manager; and Alan Lincoln, director of feed plants, checked out the new tanker in the parking lot at Agway headquarters in DeWitt, N.Y.

The 40-foot-long trailer has capacity of 24 tons in various sized compartments, allowing the driver to deliver different feed formulations to several farmers on each trip from a feed plant. A 38-foot Stinger auger and pneumatic blower tubes allow farm feed bins to be filled at a rate of a ton a minute. The new generation of feed trucks, costing $125,000 each, is part of Agway's renewed commitment to Northeast agriculture, said Newman. They join a fleet of more than 200 trucks delivering Agway feed to farmers.

Snider Donates Holstein To Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Obie Snider, well-known Holstein breeder from Imler, Bedford County, has donated Singing-Brook N-Boy Mandy 4 to the Department of Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State.

Mandy 4 is an animal of high genetic merit, with a pedigree containing some of the outstanding animals of the breed. Her dam, Jackbuilt Chairman Mandy, is an elite cow and the mother of outstanding sons at both of Pennsylvania's artificial insemination units.

Mandy 4 will remain at Singing-Brook Farm, where she will be used in an embryo-transfer program. She will be bred to elite sires of the breed and flushed at regular intervals in an effort to provide high-quality replacements for Penn State's Holstein herd.

Penn State's first dairy herd, established in 1889, became infected with tuberculosis in 1916, and all but a dozen head were destroyed. To rebuild the herd, 24 Holstein heifers were purchased from James Stewart of Jamestown, and from 1919 until 1922, breeders across the Commonwealth donated 16 head to assist in the effort.

Single animals and a few small groups of one breed or another were purchased over the years.

All breeds but Holsteins were sold in 1991. One significant addition to the Holstein herd in 1965 was the donation of 65 head by Penn State benefactor Albert B. Craig of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Penn State is grateful to Snider for his gift of this valuable animal, according to a news release. He has contributed to his alma mater in many ways, most notably as a trustee of the University and Chairman and chief benefactor of Penn State's Ag Arena campaign.

Unverferth Snap-Ons: more of what you're looking for Operating Guidelines

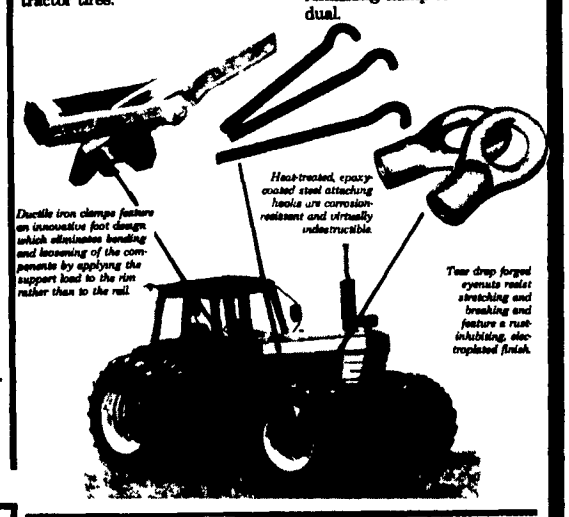
As in all dual wheel applications, Snap-On duals should be maintained at lower air pressure than the original tractor tires.

To remove Snap-On duals, simply position one clamp at top center and remove all other clamps. Then, using the furnished handle for additional leverage, disengage the remaining clamp to loosen the dual.



Ductile iron clamps feature an innovative foot design which eliminates bending and loosening of the components by applying the support load to the rim rather than to the rail.
Heat-treated, epoxy-coated steel attaching hooks are corrosion-resistant and virtually indestructible.
Tear drop forged eyenuts resist stretching and breaking and feature a rust-inhibiting, electroplated finish.

Unverferth's economical new S-tine cultivator teams rugged S-tines with an aggressive roller basket for thorough secondary tillage.

In addition, the rear grill swings open and the engine cover swings up for access to the engine, battery and filters.

- Patented square-tube auger — Hydraulically powers up and down to break up solid material.
- Varifle discharge — Spreads smoothly and evenly for complete application control.
- Five models — From 192 to 596 bushel heaped capacities to match your operation.
- 10-year warranty — Against rust-through on the tank for peace of mind.

Great Plains

THE NO-TILL GRAIN DRILL LEADER...

Great Plains delivers good, even stands in a wide variety of soil and residue conditions. The components are simple: The coulter provides a mini-seedbed and the depth gauging press wheel runs smoothly on the soil cleared by the coulter (and then by the opener), ensuring accurate depth control of the opener. The opener delivers the seed to the bottom of the seed trench where the seed is firmed into the moist soil at a consistent depth.

THERE IS A GREAT PLAINS NO-TIL DRILL for you — from 7' to 30'...

Great Plains

Dedicated to the science of no-till seeding.

Model 200MF Stainless Steel. Finished in-plant and ready to ship.

Get Comforting Heat and Efficiency.

The Mahoning Outdoor Multi-Fuel Furnaces provide thermostat controlled heat by economically burning wood, coal or fuel oil. The furnace is placed 25-100 feet outside the structure to be heated, connections between the furnace and building are buried underground. Wood or coal is the primary burning fuel lasting 8-12 hours in the furnace For convenient, automatic firing the separate oil burner combustion chamber can provide heat until wood or coal burning is desired. Both Wood/Coal & the Fuel Oil burners are enclosed to heat the same water tank The purpose of the firebox is to heat the water-filled tank surrounding the outside unit, this heated water is then circulated through underground pipes into your home A heating coil is installed inside your existing heat system The thermostat controls the blower which picks the heat off the coils and delivers warm air through existing ducts and registers There are safeties which eliminate the danger of over-pressurizing the system and automatic shutdown in case of a power failure The Mahoning Outdoor Furnace can also be connected to an existing hydronic heating system, that operates at 180° F or less, using fin tube baseboard, cast iron radiators or hanging hydronic heaters Only the thermostat and heating coils are installed inside your home, eliminating open fire dangers, smoke, dust and messy kindling wood boxes Adjust the thermostat for the Mahoning Outdoor Furnace to your comfort setting and it automatically controls the water pump and blower to circulate heat to your home You may set the thermostat for your existing heat system to back-up the Mahoning Outdoor Furnace when not in operation or in case the firebox is left to burn out. An Aquastat senses the temperature of the water in the outside unit and automatically adjusts the combustion rate to maintain the correct temperature (normally 180 degrees).

Hot Water too...!

A Mahoning Outdoor Furnace is a heat exchanger By running a cold water line from your home to the outside unit, fresh household cold water can be heated and returned to the hot water plumbing in the house A tempering valve adjusts the hot water at the faucets to a range of 120° to 160°. This boiler system will adapt to any existing plumbing. Heat your pool & hot tub with energy generated by a Mahoning Outdoor Furnace!

New M-F 100-140 hp tractors

Advanced QUADRAM Power makes a difference you can hear and feel.

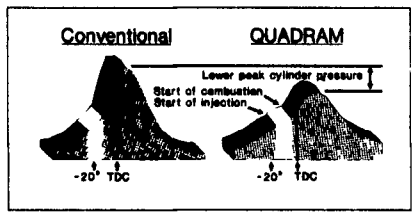
Massey-Ferguson is setting the standards for the 90s with three new 100 to 140 hp high-performance tractors that deliver improved engine torque characteristics and fuel efficiency with lower noise levels and lower engine stress.

Revolutionary new engines

The key to quick, smooth, efficient combustion is complete air and fuel mixing.

The Quadram cylinders produce an intense swirl of air for quick and thorough mixing of the fuel and air after injection. As a result, injection can be delayed closer to top-dead-center (TDC).

A unique 4-lobed (QUAD) bowl on the crown of the piston maximizes the amount of air swirl in the combustion chamber.



Lower peak cylinder pressures and stresses result when less combustion takes place prior to TDC.

Perkins 1000 Series engines have a very small amount of combustion taking place prior to TDC. As a result, the engines are more efficient and powerful, with much lower noise and vibration.

You'll notice the Quadram difference right away. The engine runs smoother and quieter — up to 50% quieter than competitive engines.

But the only way you can really appreciate the M-F Quadram advantage is to actually see and hear the tractors perform. So even if you aren't currently in the market for a tractor of this size, you owe it to yourself to see the latest in agricultural engine technology.

Gro-Mor Offers Spring Planting Tips

LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) — For the past 37 years, Richard Breckbill of Oxford, has run a dairy and a grain farm. He owns 275 acres and rents 1,250 acres, and grows corn, soybeans, alfalfa, barley, and wheat.

For the past 15 years, he has been using liquid fertilizer, and Gro-Mor liquid fertilizer for the past seven.

On spring planting, Breckbill said, "We use 3-18-18 on the alfalfa and 9-18-9 on the corn. We foliage-feed our alfalfa when the regrowth is two to five inches tall, and then we put the insecticide and boron in. We see very good results with that, including improved feed value for our dairy cows."

He said, "When we plant corn, we split the application. We put three gallons on the seed and five gallons on the side of the row. The big thing I see is that it doesn't burn the seed.

"In the spring, it's very important to put the 9-18-9 on when you plant early, because it gets the corn out of the ground and gets it going early. It also has strong root development."

Dick said he prefers Gro-Mor liquid fertilizer because it's easy to handle and noncorrosive.

According to Marty Campfield, director of agronomic services for Nutrient Solutions in Agriculture (a division of Gro-Mor Plant Food Co.), "Spring always seems to 'spring on us' just when we start thinking about calibrating the planter and manure spreader, getting the lime and fertilizer spread, and figuring out which crops will go where. Maybe this year you're actually prepared or maybe, once again, you're not."

Either way, here's a checklist of spring planting items to consider.

Manure

• Get a manure analysis done to know your actual nutrient values per ton or 100 gallons of manure.

• Calibrate your manure spreader for the type of manure you use on your farm. You might be surprised what you're actually applying per acre.

• Consider the benefits of immediate incorporation of spring-applied manure. This can really boost the amount of recoverable nitrogen.

• Decide if you should import or export manure to or from your farm.

Fertilizer:

• Consider the advantages of true-solution liquid as a starter fertilizer.

• Be sure to have soil testing done on a three-year rotational basis on all fields, including rented ground.

• Plan on tissue testing a few of your fields this spring and summer to determine the effectiveness of your fertility program.

• Do some nitrogen sidedress soil testing to determine the amount of nitrogen actually available to your corn at sidedressing time. This will save you money on nitrogen fertilizer you may not need.

• Consider the added value of micronutrients in your fertilizer, such as zinc for corn, boron for alfalfa, and manganese for soybeans.

Crop Rotations:

• Are you thinking of trying some new crops this year — maybe soybeans for the first time? Read up on the management needed for top yields.

• If you're planting corn in a prior alfalfa field, don't forget to deduct the residual nitrogen from your normal corn nitrogen fertilizer rates. This can be as much as 100 pounds of nitrogen per acre or more.

• If you plow in green manure crops planted in the fall for corn in the spring, or rotate into corn from soybeans, you also get a nitrogen credit.

Planter:

• Now is the time to check over your planter(s) and drill(s). If they are set up for dry fertilizer, check to see that the moving parts and the fertilizer hoppers are not rusted fast or corroded through. If you use liquid, check the condition of your pump(s), tubing, and fittings.

• Think about your desired plant populations, and calibrate for the additional population you'll need to plant to achieve this final population goal.

Field Maps:

• This is a good time to create or update field maps.

• Think about new fields you are renting or fields you may have sold or are no longer renting.

• Be sure each map shows an accurate representation of the field, with landmarks noted — streams and roads as boundaries, for instance.

• Each field should be marked with a number that never changes, and the acreage.

IPM:

• IPM, or integrated pest management, is the combination of any management practices that improve the efficiency or effectiveness of crop production, and the minimization of negative effects from weeds, insects, and other plant pests.

• What is your IPM program going to be this year?

PJCA Sets Show At Beef Expo

PORT ALLEGANY (McKean Co.) — The Pennsylvania Junior Cattlemen's Association (PJCA) will hold its third annual Junior Steer and Heifer Preview Show at the 4th annual Pennsylvania Beef Expo, scheduled for March 25-28 at the Penn State Ag Arena in University Park.

The Expo is an annual event sponsored by Penn State Department of Dairy and Animal Science, Pennsylvania Dept of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Beef Council, and Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association.

A Junior Heifer Show will be held Sunday, March 28, at 8 a.m. Classes will be divided by age within each breed. Minimum age of heifers is November 30, 1992 (must be weaned) and maximum age is September 1, 1990. Heifers with calves at side will be shown in dam's age group as one entry unit.

The Junior Steer Show is scheduled for Sunday, March 28, at 1 p.m. Steer classes will be broken by weight and all steers will be weighed at 1 p.m. on Saturday March 27. Light, middle, and heavy-weight division champions will compete for grand champion. Premiums and ribbons will be awarded to all participants and trophies and banners will be awarded to champions.

In an incentive program started this year, an added purse is being established for the supreme champion female award with the intention of rewarding any junior member who purchases a superior heifer at one of the cooperating breed sales at the Pennsylvania Beef Expo and shows her at the Junior Heifer Show on March 28.

To be eligible for the added purse, the heifer must be purchased at a breed sale held in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Beef Expo and must be from a cooperating breed association. A list of all cooperating breeds will be available at the Expo prior to the breed sales and announcements will be made at individual breed sales regarding eligibility.

Entries can be made on the attached form. Any and all individuals under the age of 21 are invited to show and participate in this event. Please direct all entries and any questions to J-Bar Cattle Co., Jeff Brown, RD#3 Box 184, Port Allegany, PA 16743, (814) 642-2564.

Crop Loans Deadline Announced

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Richard Troutman, chairman of the Berks County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said price support loans on 1992 wheat, oats, rye, and barley will be available through March 31. Loans on corn sorghum and soybeans are available through May 31.

County loan rates per bushels are wheat - $2.53/bu.; barley - $1.29/bu.; oats - $1.05/bu.; corn - $1.95/bu.; sorghum - $2.87/bu.; rye - $1.63/bu.; and soybeans - $5.07/bu.

"Many farmers use our price support loan program to obtain interim operating capital or hold their grain for future delivery," Troutman said. The loans have a nine-month maturity date with variable monthly interest rates. "Maturing 1992-crop wheat is not eligible for the farmer-owned reserve," he said.

As of February 23, local producers have obtained federal price support loans on more than 208,449 bushels of 1992 grain and soybean crops.

To be eligible for price support loans and other farm program benefits, producers must participate in acreage reduction programs. The 1993 programs open March 1.

Two-Cylinder Club Holds Banquet

PLUMSTEADVILLE (Bucks Co.) — The Bucks-Mont Two-Cylinder Club held its first annual banquet and Charter Night, recently at the Plumsteadville Fire House.

There were 167 present, including family and friends.

Tim Bock, Pennsylvania state director of Two-Cylinder Club Worldwide, Inc. presented the 12 directors with two-cylinder pins. Roy S. Landis, club president, accepted the charter on behalf of the club.

A slide presentation of Amish Life in Ohio was shown by Chuck Strouse of Blooming Glen, after which Bill Campbell, Newtown, retired employee of I.G. Sales, Silverdale, spoke on the development of the two-cylinder tractor.

Door prizes donated by club members, as well as local merchants, were given away throughout the evening.

Engle To New Zealand

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Clair Engle, associate professor of animal science, will be spending the first six months of 1993 on sabbatical in New Zealand learning about agriculture technology transfer.

Engle will study firsthand how the technology transfer system at Massey University, Palmerston North, might be implemented into agriculture extension education programs here in Pennsylvania.

Technology transfer, simply stated, means moving new ideas from laboratories to farm practices. According to Engle, "Its success depends on a partnership of farmers and faculty who are committed to planning and implementing new programs for improving a farmer's profitability and environmental practices."

An industry user group concept for agriculture technology transfer was initiated in New Zealand in the early 1980s. The adoption and success of this educational process has received recent international attention for its positive impact within the New Zealand livestock and dairy industries during the last 10 years. It is also evidenced by renewed enthusiasm in livestock farming and increased interest in applying new technology in regions where the user group concept has lasted for three or more years.

On-farm Composting Handbook Available

By Kenneth B. Kephart

On-Farm Composting, a 186-page manual researched and written by a team of scientists, engineers, farmers, and manufacturers, is available for $10.00 from Penn State's Publications Distribution Center.

As manure odor problems continue to mount in Pennsylvania, it appears that composting may offer a partial solution for some livestock producers. Composting is the aerobic decomposition of organic materials. Mixtures of manure and dry material, such as straw, compost easily. During the process, temperatures of 120-140 degrees F are reached, killing pathogens and creating a low-odor product. This is important at the time of land application since odor problems with raw manure are maximized when raw manure is surface-spread on fields. In addition, composted manure serves as an excellent soil conditioner.

The composting manual provides a wealth of details and drawings to enable the producer to compost manure both effectively and economically. To order copies of On-Farm Composting (NRAES-54), send a check or money order for $10.00 (payable to Penn State University) to: Publications Distribution Center, College of Agricultural Sciences, 112 Ag Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802.

Research Briefs For Swine

By Kenneth B. Kephart

1. Injecting zinc-arginine complex into the testicle at four weeks, is effective at reducing testicular weight. Further, injected pigs are superior to knife-castrated boars in all carcass traits. But the compound does not appear to be suitable for chemical castration, since boar odor is not reduced.

2. Supplementing sows with extra (90 to 100 mg/head/day) riboflavin during the first 12 days after breeding had no effect on number of pigs born, stillborns, or litter birth weight.

3. A single injection of 150 mg of iron dextran maintains optimal hemoglobin levels in the pig until weaning. An oral dose of 60 mg of iron does not adequately maintain hemoglobin.

4. High fiber diets for sows in gestation reduces stereotypical behavior (chewing, excess water consumption) and improves weaning weights of pigs.

5. Gilts housed in pens bedded with straw during gestation show no obvious behavioral differences when moved to a farrowing crate, compared to gilts housed in crates throughout gestation.

6. Sows housed in farrowing crates compared to those in open pens or walk-through crates spend more time sitting, drinking, chewing, and lying on their udders — behaviors associated with increased levels of frustration in the sow.

7. Use of a roller mill for processing corn reduced stomach lesions and ulcerations in growing pigs compared to that of a hammer mill. Weight gain and feed efficiency values are similar for both groups.

8. Pelleting feed increased stomach lesions in growing pigs compared to that of meal feed regardless of initial particle size. The best compromise for optimizing performance and minimizing stomach irritation is a particle size between 600 and 900 microns.

Mold Problems on Corn

Kenneth B. Kephart

This year will go down as one of high corn yields in Pennsylvania. We got the corn in the ground early, and we had plenty of rain. But we also had more than our share of cool weather. And as producers are learning, much of the corn hadn't fully matured when the killing frosts hit. The drying process slows down drastically after the corn stalk dies.

So we're left with lots of corn, still in the field, that contains 25-35% moisture. That's wet enough to support mold growth, which can lead to mycotoxin contamination. In fact, we've had enough mild days this fall that mold is already a problem in a lot of corn.

If you're feeding some of this corn to growing pigs, you should be concerned. If you're feeding it to sows, you should be worried sick. Abortions and drastic drops in milk production are two nightmares that no one needs during a $40 hog market.

What Should You Do?

1. Watch the pigs for symptoms. A sudden drop in feed intake, or any reproductive problems in the sow herd should make you suspicious. Also keep your eyes open for subtle changes like redness or swelling in the vulvas of young gilts. If you see any of these symptoms, avoid feeding the corn to the breeding herd if possible. Sure, feeding contaminated corn to a grower-finisher pig can be costly, but at least the effects are reversible. Once a sow aborts, you're back to square one for at least another four months.

2. Consider having the corn tested. You can purchase test kits for various mycotoxins that will cost roughly $10 per test. As of

MATT ANTOS
Eastern Field Agronomist
Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

The summer of 1992 coupled one of the coolest and cloudiest growing seasons on record with a freeze in late September which left fields of corn with immature grain and high moisture contents. Hardest hit were many parts of Pennsylvania, Ohio, as well as most northern corn growing areas. Wet fall weather eliminated any natural "dry down" and further restricted harvest activities leading to many reports of low quality or moldy corn.

The most common quality complaint centered on chaffy grain with poor test weights. The most common molds reported were Cladosporium sp., Gibberella zeae, and Fusarium species. Cladosporium, a black mold (saprophytic), was the most widely observed, according to area experts. It appears as a dark, green-black mold found at the kernel base, and was most commonly associated with prematurely frozen corn left to dry in the field. Cladosporium molds are not generally associated with the production of poisons known as mycotoxins.

Gibberella and Fusarium ear molds commonly referred to as white molds also have been reported but to a much lesser extent in harvested grains. These molds can produce mycotoxins such as DON (deoxynivalenol), zearalenone, fumonisin and T-2, which can cause serious health problems in livestock consuming the grain. White molds appear as white-pink kernel discolorations. Gibberella starts at the tip of the ear while Fusarium is scattered throughout the ear and is generally associated with bird damage.

Combine Adjustment Critical

In areas where corn remains to be harvested, special care should be taken when adjusting the combine to reduce cracked or broken seed coats. Excessive amounts of fines often can create conditions favorable for the continued development of molds in storage. For this reason, we recommend pre-cleaning low quality or moldy grain before drying or binning. Furthermore, caution should be taken in feeding fines screened from grain with significant mold contamination. Under no circumstances should fines be fed to dairy cows, poultry or to young or pregnant animals before being tested for mycotoxins.

Careful harvesting and cleaning are only the beginning. The two most significant factors in reducing the growth and development of molds in stored grain are moisture content and grain temperature. Low quality or moldy grain should be dried quickly to a kernel moisture of 13 percent or lower to inhibit the growth of molds during winter storage. Every effort should be made to market this grain before the onset of warmer temperatures.

Monitor Storage Conditions

Extending storage into the summer months will require grain moisture to be lowered an additional 1 percent below winter storage levels, to 12 percent or less. Aerate to cool grain as soon as it is binned. Stored grain temperature should be maintained around 35-40 degrees F for safe winter storage. When possible, store low quality or

One quick turn, and you've improved penetration in tough soils and residue. And for a true, consistent furrow, each 1/4-inch offset double-disk opener's pinch-point is closer to where the blade meets the soil. The seed is placed in front of the opener bearing, so there are no obstructions. You get accurate seed placement and a more uniform seeding depth. All this, plus easy-to-set depth-gauging press wheels.

The 455 is available in 25-, 30-, and 35-foot working widths. The quick-folding design gets you from field to field fast and easy with a narrow transport width of just over 15 feet.

Two mycotoxins that will likely contaminate corn this fall are zearalenone and vomitoxin (deoxynivalenol). Zearalenone can lead to reproductive problems, whereas vomitoxin causes feed refusal.

Zearalenone is an estrogen-like compound. One ppm in the feed enlarges the vulva and uterus, even in young gilts. Sows may fail to cycle, or show pseudo pregnancy when consuming feed containing 3 ppm of zearalenone. Higher levels may lead to abortion.

Levels as low as 2 ppm reduce testicular growth and total sperm numbers in boars. When levels reach 40 ppm of zearalenone, testosterone in the blood may drop and prevent the boar from mating successfully.

Zearalenone also reportedly irritates the lining of the rectum. This leads to straining and eventual prolapse or "blow-out" of the rectum.

Vomitoxin is also common in damp corn, and especially in scabby wheat. The most obvious effect of vomitoxin is a dramatic reduction in feed intake. Levels as low as 2.5 ppm impair feed intake and weight gains. Levels of 20 ppm can cause vomiting in young pigs

A positive mycotoxin test o your corn is clear proof that yc have a problem. A negative test only means that there was no mycotoxin present in the sample you checked.

3. Diluting the corn with uncontaminated grain may help. But keep in mind, that if the grain has a lot of mycotoxin present, diluting with clean grain may be futile.

4. One feed additive, Nova-Sil, has been effective in reducing the harmful effects of aflatoxin, a mycotoxin commonly occurring under hot, dry conditions. Nova-Sil is an aluminosilicate that was developed as a flow agent to reduce caking in feed. It also has the effect of absorbing aflatoxin when added at the rate of 10 pounds per ton. The cost is about $.25 per pound. In experiments with young pigs, it almost completely reversed the effects of aflatoxin. Unfortunately, it provides only a marginal response against vomitoxin and zearalenone.

5. If you can feed the grain to cattle, the losses will probably be minimized since ruminants are generally less affected by mycotoxins compared to pigs.

6. What about putting corn in the silo? Hundreds of studies have shown that pigs perform well on good quality high moisture corn. But the silo will not correct a mold problem that started in the field.

7. What about roasting? It will probably destroy the mold, but may not affect the mycotoxins, which are generally heat stable.

Summary

1. This year's corn crop is high in quantity, but low in quality. The moisture content has been so high for so long that molds (and the mycotoxins they produce) seem to be contaminating many fields.

2. Watch your pigs closely or consider testing the corn to determine whether you've got a problem. If mycotoxins are present, at the very least, avoid feeding the corn to the breeding herd.

3. The feed additive, Nova-Sil, is relatively economical and is probably worth a try. But studies have shown it is not too effective against Fusarium molds and mycotoxins that are common under the present conditions.

Corn

moldy grain in separate bins. This practice permits special handling and will give you time to evaluate alternative options.

The best management practices do not always guarantee success. Low quality or moldy corn still can cause a variety of problems during storage. Reports of grain heating in the center of bins have begun to surface. This heating can lead to rapid mold growth, or "hot spots," prone to severe spoilage and mycotoxin development.

Heating and eventual molding of grain thought sufficiently dried can still occur when large outside temperature swings affect the air movement within the bin. For example, when inside air next to the outside bin wall cools, it moves downward. The warmer air is then forced upward in the center of the bin. As this air reaches the surface it cools and moisture condenses within the top layer of grain — increasing the potential for mold development.

Grain should be monitored regularly to minimize the risk of heating in the grain bin. The most accurate monitoring technique is to auger out small quantities of grain and physically check for heating in the center of the bin, or to look for condensation within the top layer of grain. Heat and/or moisture buildup can be reduced by installing a low-volume fan at the top of a perforated duct in the center of the bin which will pull air down through the bin, equalize the temperature and prevent condensation. The most prudent course of action may be to market or feed the grain as soon as possible to prevent further losses in quality.

Grain Testing Recommended

Proper grain storage will generally minimize further problems but will not reduce the level of toxins already produced. If you suspect your grain may have a problem with mycotoxins, or are concerned about low quality moldy corn, have the grain checked by a laboratory such as the BAI Diagnostic Lab in Somerdale, Pa. (717-787-3400). Testing is not a guarantee of safe grain. Mycotoxin assays can be expensive and are only as reliable as the sample from which they are taken.

A more reliable test for mycotoxin contamination is to feed moldy grain to a few test animals. Generally, if the level is high enough to cause serious risk, the symptoms will be observed in these test animals. Furthermore, additional precautions should be taken when feeding highly susceptible animals like horses, poultry, swine and young or gestating animals.

Preventing future problems with low quality or moldy corn begins with early planning and a thorough review of your agronomic practices. Choose hybrids with maturity ratings compatible to your growing conditions. Early planting aimed at timely harvest can overcome many harvest concerns. When possible, rotate out of corn or small grains to reduce the amount of disease spores present in the field.

Where rotation is not feasible, tillage should be used to incorporate crop residue and help reduce disease pressure. Minimize plant stresses by matching population with hybrid recommendations. Maintain soil PH and fertility at optimum levels and control weeds as well as insect pests as needed. Healthy plant stands are your best defense against low quality moldy corn.

TO THE RAY BICKSLER FAMILY

Purina®

PLUS 7572 Pounds IN 30 MONTHS

After twenty five years of breeding for top genetics at RUSSELLDALE HOLSTEINS, the total program has finally come together. It seems many dairymen knew about the quality of cattle that come from the Bicksler herd despite their rolling herd average stayed around 16,000 lbs. Since allowing the team of PURINA MILLS and ANTHONYS FEED MILL an opportunity to work with the feeding program in June 1990, the PERFORMANCE speaks for itself.
